SLIDE BLOCKS MALAHAT

A rock slide on the Malahat near the Rock Cut at 5:30 a.m. today caused $400 damage to a panel truck travelling southbound.

Driver Doug Bissenden of Victoria escaped injury.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said traffic was reduced to one lane for more than four hours.

Parts of the highway will be blocked for most of the day as workmen clear the road, the spokesman said.

It was the third slide in the area in the past month-and-a-half.

RCMP said no damage occurred in the earlier slides.

The department of highways has been widening the road north of the slides, but has not done any work where the slides took place.

Arrests of 46 Smash $117M Narcotics Ring

Times News Services

An international police crackdown has dealt a crippling blow to the Bangkok Connection — a $117 million conspiracy to import hundreds of pounds of heroin into the North American market.

Beginning 3 p.m. Tuesday with synchronized raids in Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, New York, San Francisco and Southeast Asia, police arrested 46 people, most of them Chinese, major figures in the heroin trade.

RCMP had warrants for six people in B.C. and by 7 p.m. all had been arrested.

"This is the largest and most significant narcotics prosecution in history," Norm Mullins, regional director of the federal justice department said in Vancouver.

U.S. authorities had told him it was the first time police had reached such high levels in the heroin trade, he said.

Foon Choy Leong, alias Victor Leong, was arrested in Prince George.

They will appear in County Court in Vancouver today to face extradition proceedings.

The warrants for their arrest were issued to the RCMP after officials received a request signed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Attorney-General William Saxbe, asking for extradition of suspects.

Five federal grand jury indictments unsealed in two southern New York district courts named 71 persons, 25 of whom were cited as unindicted co-conspirators. The indictments, filed in September, remained sealed until today to allow the government time to complete extradition for some of the defendants.

U.S. prosecutors said that among the defendants including two women, were citizens of Canada, the United States, Thailand, Singapore, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Germany.

The indictments allege that 300 pounds of heroin and 100 pounds of opium were smuggled into North America and distributed throughout the continent from 1970 to 1972.

Drug enforcement administrator John R. Bartels, Jr. in Washington estimated the street value of the heroin at $117.5 million. He said the value of the opium could not be estimated because it is used in different forms.

The international smuggling operation involved New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, as well as cities in Japan, The Philippines, Thailand and Hong Kong.

The indictments said the opium and heroin was grown in Thailand, moved to Hong Kong, and brought to the United States and Canada by Scandinavian seamen who regularly travelled the route.

An investigation begun in the U.S. was aided by cooperation of Thailand police and the Hong Kong Royal Police, Bartels said. He said those arrested abroad were being charged with violating laws of their own countries but also may be subject to extradition to the United States for prosecution under U.S. laws.

U.S. Attorney Paul Curran said the indictments represent

JUMP PREDICTED IN HEROIN COST

The demise of the Bangkok Connection heroin ring will mean higher street prices for the drug and a move to re-establish old supply channels in other parts of the world.

Staff Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria area squad said today heroin will "certainly" increase in price from the current $40 a cap (which, in itself, is double last year's price).

"Whenever that happens we generally get a drop in the number of addicts," he said.

"We could see more Mexican heroin coming in and perhaps the re-establishment of old Turkish sources," Staples said. "However, it is very difficult to predict just where it will come from."

Staples said the raids, described the largest in history, will have a "considerable impact" on the supply in Vancouver.

The Victoria market will be "indirectly affected" as virtually all the heroin traffic emanates from Vancouver, he said.

But the pinch won't be felt for at least a month, he added.

"A lot of addicts will be seeking out methadone to tide them over . . . and possibly there will be an increase in breaking and enterings, particularly drug stores.

"The screws are starting to come down on the whole heroin picture . . . provided we can keep the pressure up," he said.

Chill View But Warm Reception

PEKING — Premier Barrett and his hearfier companions climbed the Great Wall Tuesday and gazed across the dusty foothills and broad plains of China.

The visit was brief as the group had to return to the city for the first of a series of talks with Chinese trade officials.

It was cold and windy at the Wall despite an unusual November sunshine, but the premier donned his heavy fur hat and scrambled up the steep incline of the Wall's walkway, determined to reach its highest point.

A specially-rebuilt section of the 4,000-mile wall is a two-hour drive from Peking and was the first stop on a busy first day of sightseeing and meetings.

The B.C. delegation, their Chinese hosts and interpreters left the hotel early in the morning and drove through the crowded, smoggy streets of Peking as thousands of workers headed out to begin a long day's work.

As the seven-car cavalcade honked and swerved its way past buses, trucks and horse-drawn carts, the people stared in a disinterested way at the shiny cars and their Western passengers.

When the group passed through the last old wall of the city, the sidewalks disappeared and the long rows of dingy grey low-slung houses, stores and small factories finally gave way to open spaces.

Crowds were still everywhere — bicycling to larger factories, working on small sections of the road and gathering in the fields where the last northern cotton crop is being harvested.

The road was filled with a strange assortment of dirty, dilapidated old carts and trucks carrying vegetables, hay and other precious goods, but the most outstanding travellers were the cyclists carrying on their backs huge bundles of twigs for firewood.

As the road begins to wind up the low, dry foothills to the wall, the British Columbians are reminded of the Okanagan.

The neighboring fields are filled with now-bare fruit trees and circular piles of bricks drying in the sun outside small brick factories.

After the Great Wall, the group drove through the majestic forested area of the Ming Tombs where they were treated to a Chinese-style box lunch along with the now-familiar tea, beer and orange pop.

The gold and jewels of the 400-year-old Ming Dynasty are displayed outside but while Barrett and his party were openly awed at the splendor of the relics, much to their hosts satisfaction, they expressed more interest in a giant revolutionary mural alongside which told of the emperor and his landlords' cruelty to the people.

The guides said today's workers must be given the opportunity to see the magnificent tombs "because it is part of the culture created by the people" but revolutionary reminders are scattered everywhere and one poster in the heart of the tomb said money spent on building the shrine could feed one million people with rice for 6½ years.

Attorney-general Alex Macdonald pleased his companions by saying money "should be spent on people not things."

Back in Peking, Barrett, along with MacMillan Bloedel president Denis Timmis and IWA President Jack Munro, were immediately rushed to their first set of trade talks with the vice-chairman of the Chinese council for the promotion of international trade.

The 30-minute meeting over tea was formal and slightly strained with the premier hoping to impress on the vice-chairman the wealth of B.C.'s forest products and to receive some concrete answer to his invitation to hold a small Chinese exposition or trade fair in Vancouver.

The host talked at great length about Canadian wheat, about friendship between Canada and China, about the need for communication and visits to build better trade links, but he gently evaded the premier's invitation. As the group stood to leave, Munro put B.C.'s position more bluntly and incited a chuckle from the vice-chairman when he said "not only do we have good wheat, but good lumber."

Embassy official John Higginbotham told the premier the meeting went well and the Chinese were impressed that both a labor and management representative had attended but he warned that "you never, ever, ever know" what their final reaction will be. Barrett appears to be developing a good rapport with his hosts; he is as humble as he can be but still out-going and obviously impressed with what he sees.

External affairs officials warned Barrett before he left that jokes are difficult and do not go over well but Tuesday evening at the first formal banquet put on by the group's hosts, the premier insisted on joking and the Chinese were most receptive — laughing and joking back with him. The eight-course banquet was accompanied by much talk of friendship and expansive toasts from both sides. Barrett presented a book on B.C. flowers to his hosts at the end of the evening and the British Columbians finished their first long day in China. Today the group will visit the grave of Dr. Norman Bethune.

ROCKING CHAIRS big and small, shown by Goodwill employee Betty Wheatley, are among 120 items to go by the gavel at Goodwill's auction Saturday. Other goods at the Collectors Item Auction will include silver teaspoons dated 1898, a two-volume high school textbook from 1887, a New York fireman's helmet, beaded dresses, a mantel clock of the early 1900s, a Mexican sombrero and paintings in both oil and watercolor. Doors at 220 Bay St. open at noon with bidding to start at 1:30.

Doman Gains Slegg Sawmill

Doman Industries Ltd. paid about $1.5 million to Slegg Acceptance Corporation to acquire its Cowichan Bay sawmill site where Doman plans to build a new $7 million forest products complex.

Doman earlier had purchased some of the equipment of the sawmill at public auction.

The property owned by Slegg Forest Products Ltd. was in receivership.

Company president H. S. Doman said today his firm would spend $500,000 clearing sawdust, abandoned logs and other debris from the area in preparation for construction of a new sawmill.

About 25 men would be employed in clean-up operations.

Work on the new sawmill would begin this year and open in August or September, 1975, depending upon market conditions. It would employ 150 men producing 125 million board feet of lumber per year.

Another 150 men will be employed in service operations connected with the new mill, including log sorting and trucking. Doman bought 165 acres of land along with the mill and will use about half that area in the sawmill operation.

The new mill will increase Doman's lumber producing capacity by 50 per cent. Current sawmill capacity is about 250 million board feet per year in Doman sawmills.

747 Crashes 55 Killed

NAIROBI (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and officials for the West German airline said 55 persons were dead and six missing. It was the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747.

The airline's Nairobi manager, Helmuth Wolff, said 96 of the 157 persons aboard survived the crash. Fifty of these, he said, were virtually unhurt.

Wolff said there were 139 passengers aboard, most of them Germans, and 18 crew members. He said previous death figures announced by Kenya's Communications Minister, Omolo Okero, were incorrect.

Lufthansa said they had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, but added that the jumbo jet's flight recorder had been recovered.

Witnesses said the plane apparently lost power, shortly after takeoff on the final leg of a Frankfurt-to-Johannesburg, South Africa, flight and its tail section struck an embankment, breaking the plane into a dozen pieces.

UN Plea For Mideast Cool-Down

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has called on Israelis and Arabs to co-operate with UN peacekeeping efforts to prevent a new Middle East war.

Anxious about heightened tension in the area, Waldheim appealed to "all the governments concerned" Tuesday to avoid touching off the fifth war in a quarter-century of crisis.

The call followed reports that Syria is uncertain over letting the UN peacekeeping force remain on the Golan Heights for another six months when the truce team's mandate expires Nov. 30.

Diplomatic sources said Syria is thinking about renewing the mandate for a three-month period instead of for six months.

Budget Takes Blame For Oil Price Drop

CALGARY (CP) — Prices of Canadian-based oil company stocks declined Tuesday in response to provisions in the federal budget, says Ernie Braithwaite, vice-president of the Alberta district, Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

He said oil stock prices were off 10 points, one of the largest drops this year and the largest since May 7, the day after the initial federal budget was introduced.

The budget Monday night refused oil companies the right to deduct provincial royalties from their income taxes.

Braithwaite said the shares traded Tuesday were in small volumes, indicating that individual shareholders were disposing of their holdings.

But another investment spokesman said the decline in prices was an "over-reaction" and prices should begin to pick up today.

NEWS BRIEFS

How Sweet It Is

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Michigan Sugar Co. said Tuesday its profits during the past 12 months were up 2,000 per cent above the 1973 fiscal year with sales just about doubled. The profits would have been a 4,000-per-cent increase except for a change in accounting procedures, the company said.

Woods Woes Deepen

VANCOUVER (CP)— The Council of Forest Industries says that unemployment in the British Columbia forest industry continues to climb. Executive vice-president N. R. Dusting, FIR executive vice-president, said Tuesday the current layoff figure is 15,258, an increase of four per cent since Nov. 1 when the total was 14,719 workers laid off.

Swiss Franc Rush

BERN (AP) — Switzerland moved Wednesday to check an international rush for the Swiss franc by imposing a stiff penalty on all new non-resident deposits. The move aimed to restore calm to the monetary markets after demand for the franc had sent the U.S. dollar and all other major western currencies declining sharply against the Swiss currency.

Ties With Tokyo Pledged by Ford

TOKYO (UPI) — Amid predictions the ruling Japanese government might fall within the week, President Ford agreed today with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka on the need to halt the spread of nuclear weapons and pledged closer ties between the two countries.

Ford wound up his hectic second full day in Tokyo at a banquet for Emperor Hirohito with a toast to "the government of Japan and millions and millions of Japanese."

Borrowing the words of the first Japanese envoy to the United States, Ford told Hirohito the most important lesson he had learned in his "memorable" trip to Japan was "the time has come when no nation may remain isolated and refuse to take part in the affairs of the rest of the world."

Ford began his day with a second round of talks with Tanaka, then addressed a luncheon at the Japan Press Club, watched a demonstration of martial arts and attended three cocktail parties prior to the banquet. One party was for leaders of the U.S. community in Japan.

Tanaka and Ford issued a joint communique agreeing on the need to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons — a clear effort to appease Japanese sensitivities over recent reports that U.S. warships bearing atomic weapons have stopped in Japanese ports.

The communique also appeared to signal Japan's willingness, after initial opposition, to accept a Ford administration proposal for all oil consuming nations to cut their petroleum imports by 10 per cent.

Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger said Ford's official discussion in Tokyo had "achieved the optimum of what he could have hoped for."

UAW Insists Chrysler Boss Quit

DETROIT (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employees scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three auto employees out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice-President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,000 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from Nov. 27 until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The company's Windsor, Ont., plant will remain in operation.

The firm is the seventh largest in the United States with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 20,300 workers already on layoffs, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December.

About 95,000 auto workers were on layoffs this week including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler. The remaining 31,575 are on temporary layoff.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent.

UAW spokesman Fraser said Chrysler will save $19 million in holiday pay by laying off the workers.

Under a special agreement reached with the UAW Tuesday, workers with more than a year seniority will receive 100 per cent of their regular take home pay during the eight-day holiday period, including company and government unemployment benefits.

BURNING WRECKAGE of Jumbo jetliner which crashed today on takeoff from Nairobi airport draws a crowd of spectators. Officials estimate 55 of the 157 persons aboard were killed. Fifty of the survivors were reported to be virtually unhurt.

Saanich Balks At Slackening Building Codes

Saanich will appeal the stripping of its power by the provincial government to enforce high safety requirements through its building and zoning bylaws.

The public works committee instructed development engineer J. R. Walker Tuesday night to start proceedings with the municipal affairs department's Building Code Appeal Board.

Walker told the committee he, Fire Chief Harold Gains and Chief Inspector Eric Gravenor were concerned about the amendment to the Municipal Act, passed about a year ago, which requires municipalities to make builders conform to the standards of the National Building Code which are lower than those set by some municipalities.

This means, Walker said, that higher standards than the NBC — which Saanich demands — are now illegal.

He said it was urgent that an appeal be made because contractors are balking at some of the demands made by Saanich in the interests of safety.

Walker said he and Gains were particularly concerned because 90 per cent of construction in Saanich was wood frame.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel condemned the legislation forcing Saanich to cut back its safety requirements to the level of the NBC.

"We're dealing with people's lives here," Ald. Mel Couvelier said. "Our requirements can be done at relatively small cost at the time of construction. With a higher standard of living, we should have higher standards in B.C."

Under the new legislation, Saanich cannot now enforce its ruling that basements and cellars have an exit door.

Alarm was expressed by aldermen that this posed a massive threat in view of the hundreds of illegal basement suites in the muncipality.

"There was a very sad case in Saanich last year," Walker reminded them, "when a mother and her three children were lost. There should never have been a second suite. It was a single-family dwelling."

Walker said another threat was the cutback from a two-hour to a one-hour rated concrete fire separation for floor levels above basements or ground floor areas used for parking vehicles in apartments, hotels, motels and buildings used for business and personal services occupancy.

Other Saanich requirements that are obsolete, unless the provincial appeal board cooperates: automatic sprinklers for all buildings more than three storeys; installation of heat rise directors at central locations in each unit of an apartment, building, hotel or motel, and magnetic holders for fire doors in corridors, that are released when fire alarms are activated.

Municipal planner Tom Loney, municipal solicitor Doug Patterson and Gains will also be asked to recommend how another deficiency in the provincial legislation can be overcome.

This concerns Saanich's safety requirement for 75 per cent fire fighting platforms on the longest side of multi-level apartment buildings. The NBC only requires a platform be laid on to any street access for aerial trucks and other fire fighting equipment.

Noel noted cancellation of the 75 per cent requirement would turn some large buildings into death traps for some residents.

KEY FERRY TALKS TODAY

Ferry negotiations were moved to Victoria this afternoon in what was expected to be a key meeting in deciding whether there will be rotating strikes as early as Friday.

Negotiators for the ferry officers component of the B.C. Government Employees' Union put a final package to the Public Service Commission Tuesday in Vancouver.

Union representative Peter Marshall said he expected the commission to reply at this afternoon's meeting "and then it is up to us for the next move."

He said "real progress" had been made since negotiations resumed Monday.

If the talks break off, it will be Friday at the earliest before the rotating strikes begin because, Marshall said, the union will give the public 24 hours notice of its intention.

Both sides have agreed not to release details of negotiating positions. Junior engineers currently earn $866 a month and captains $1,407.

SEATTLE POLICE GET 'DUM-DUMS'

SEATTLE (AP) — City police said Monday they plan to begin using hollow-point bullets, sometimes called dum-dums, banned by international convention from use in wartime since 1899.

Tim Burgess, a police department spokesman, said the switch from convention flat-tip ammunition was being made because a hollow-point bullet "offers officers adequate protection."

After dum-dums were introduced in the 19th century, they were banned from use in war by the first peace conference at the Hague. A hollow-point bullet expands and disintegrates on impact. Conventional bullets usually remain whole and pass through the target intact.

the initial results of a continuing major international effort to break up the heroin and opium trade from Southeast Asia.

Insp. Jack White, head of the Vancouver RCMP drug squad, said 24 officers conducted the raids there. None of the members of the Victoria-based drug squad took part.

The indictment describes Li as a "North American receiver" and Bing, Wong and Jang as distributors.

They regularly distributed heroin in Vancouver, New York and San Francisco, the indictment alleges.

Chau is described as a worker in the heroin distribution business and Leong as a buyer.

The indictment says the Connection supplied more than 200 pounds of heroin to a North American controller identified as Wong Shing Kong.

Among 77 overt acts listed in the indictment seven involved the B.C. suspects and took place in 1971 and 1972.

Mullins said a case against Hing Poy Wong, 47, of New Westminster, charged with possessing 24 pounds of heroin was stayed last February to protect the investigation.

B.C. 'SHORTCHANGED' IN HOUSING HELP

Adequate housing in B.C. needs equalization with federal help provided other parts of Canada, Housing Minister Lorne Nicholson said today in an indictment of Ottawa's policies.

On the first anniversary of his department, Nicholson said Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is unresponsive to the needs of B.C.

"The federal government talks about one Canada when they talk about natural resources, but they take a very centralist and discriminatory position in terms of B.C. housing." Ontario fares much better, he said.

Nicholson compared B.C. to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in deserving federal aid for housing: "B.C. is really a have-not province," he said, requiring "massive" funding for housing industry development.

B.C. is being short-changed by Ottawa, which had failed to decentralize housing decision-making as promised, Nicholson said.

He observed the lending rate to B.C. for housing purposes had been raised. "It is ironic that as a non-profit government sponsored project, we are being asked to pay ten and three-eights per cent when the Bank of Canada rate is going down," the minister noted in reference to social housing undertakings by the B.C. government.

Much of the problem in providing adequate housing in B.C. is caused by the rate of growth due to migration from other provinces, amounting to 3.4 per cent a year, he said.

Housing by the government in B.C. is still in a start-up position, Nicholson said. He was pleased to report among the accomplishments his department had helped create 2,259 units in the first 12 months, including 314 family rental units, 163 senior citizens rental units, 1,350 non-profit senior citizens' units, 350 special care beds and 82 co-op units.

The department this year has developed, 1,005 lots in sub-divisions and 96 mobile home pads, and has 14,823 units of social housing under construction or in planning stages.

Curtis To Speak At Oak Bay

Saanich and the Islands Socred Hugh Curtis — late of the Conservative party — invades his former leader's territory to speak to Oak Bay Social Credit constituents at 8 p.m. today.

But he says it is strictly routine, part of a series of speaking engagements he has been taking part in since leaving the Tories.

Scott Wallace, Oak Bay Tory MLA and leader of the party in B.C., said he was not aware of Curtis' meeting tonight in Windsor Park pavilion, "and I'm not the least bit concerned."

Curtis noted he had recently spoken to Socred constituency organizations in Saanich and Victoria and was invited by the Oak Bay constituency to address them. In addition, he has accepted an invitation to speak to Vancouver Centre constituency organizations in January.

Finally, he noted, Wallace spoke to "the remnants of the Saanich and Islands Conservative association on the heels of my departure."

LANGLEY (CP) — With Premier Barrett and two cabinet ministers in China and the Legislature sitting in Victoria, only five cabinet ministers made the annual pilgrimage to Fort Langley as part of Douglas Day celebrations Tuesday.

Fifth Gov't Group Signs Pact

The fifth of 13 bargaining divisions in the B.C. Government Employees Union has ratified an initial contract with the Public Service Commission.

Members of the environmental, resource and conservation branches voted 1,604 to 311, or 83 per cent, in favor of the agreement.

Both sides have agreed not to disclose any details of component settlements until all 13 are completed.

Earlier settlements involved correctional services; hospital and allied workers; administrative support; and marine workers (general).

Cougars Recall Trio

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association have recalled three players from their Long Island team in the North American Hockey League. Recalled were centre Joe Hardy and defencemen Larry Mavety and Jim Watson. All were with the Cougars earlier this season.

B.C. Beams Passed

OTTAWA (CP) — The public works department has not yet found any buildings with faulty laminated-wood beams which can come apart when exposed to high humidity, a department official said Tuesday.

Surveys by the department's offices in the Atlantic, Pacific and Capital regions have not discovered any faulty beams, Albert Deschamps, assistant deputy minister for design and construction, said.

The surveys were ordered in September after it was found that some beams produced by a B.C. firm, Glulam Products Ltd., were in danger of coming apart because glue joints broke down.

Deschamps said none of the beams were found in government buildings in the Pacific and capital regions. In the Atlantic region, some beams were used in the construction of small post offices, he said.

However, all the beams concerned were produced before 1968, when the problems in Glulam's manufacturing process first appeared. They were all in good condition, he said.

Last month, published reports said more than 30 buildings in Ontario, including schools, churches and arenas were being inspected because of the faulty beams.

The results of the survey in the department's three other regions will be known shortly, he said.

the weather

Over southern B.C. an intensifying storm has brought gusty winds and much precipitation to southwestern B.C. This system is now weakening as it crosses the province. In its wake another storm will follow bringing more precipitation and gusty winds to southern portions of the district during the day.

A few showers will linger following passage of this storm eastward to Alberta tonight and Thursday except for snowflurries or wet snow over the southern interior. On the north coast some cloudiness and a few showers will occur today and tonight with a few snowflurries ocurring over the central interior.

Another storm will bring more weather to northern B.C. on Thursday.

Sovereignty Flights Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — The inflation-pressed armed forces have cut back sovereignty flights over the North and the North Atlantic, flying just long enough to maintain crew expertise.

Defence Minister James Richardson gave figures indicating this Tuesday in the Commons and announced that sovereignty flights over the vast, under-populated High Arctic have been cancelled temporarily.

Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley, whose questioning brought out the figures, said later the government is showing that it cannot police or protect its own territory during the financial squeeze that is restricting armed forces operations.

He said NATO allies are concerned about the cuts.

Largely as a flag-waving gesture, the forces have been flying Argus long-range patrol aircraft from Comox, B.C., or the Maritimes over the North about twice a month, winter and summer, for years.

Although the air crews did other work—environmental, anti-submarine training, polar bear counting, fisheries patrol during the flights, their main job was to tell the world that the thousands of square miles of empty Arctic archipelago up to the North Pole belongs to Canada.

The flights in the elderly Arguses lasted for up to 14 hours and were exhausting, but were regarded as an essential part of the forces' second priority — security of the country.

There have been no flights since last September and Mr. Richardson said outside the Commons there may not be another until early in the New Year.

Ex-Beer-Slinger Raps Amnesty

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A sometime beer-slinger at a Penticton hotel is testing the Vietnam clemency program by spending two weeks in the country he fled from into Canadian exile, trying to convince American draft evaders and deserters they are being offered a bad deal by President Ford.

Steve Grossman, of Chicago, Toronto, Hornby Island and Penticton, is today on what he calls "Day Five" of a 15-day dash through the U.S. during which he is speaking out against the clemency program offered by Ford and against U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia.

He is under the impression, which he hopes is correct, that he is free for 15 days and that the U.S. authorities will not apprehend him for refusing induction and failing to keep his local draft board notified of his whereabouts, charges on which he was indicted when he fled to Canada two years ago.

Grossman cites the provision in a White House fact sheet issued on Sept. 16 that all who are eligible for the clemency program and who re-enter the U.S. "will have 15 days to report to the appropriate authority."

In fact only 97 out of perhaps tens or even hundreds of thousands of draft evaders have actually surrendered and signed a pledge to perform alternate service under the program.

Grossman's 15 days began last Saturday when he "crossed the border" — he won't say where or how — and arrived at Louisville, Ky., for the first of a series of speeches and appearances in at least seven states.

Tuesday, at a coffee shop across Pennsylvania Avenue from the justice department, Grossman refused to say what he will do when the 15 days are up — turn himself in, or return to Canada.

But he made it clear that he does not intend to perform two years "alternate service," which he described as "punishment" for his convictions.

If he did surrender, or was caught, he said: "I would not make a technical defence on the draft. I would use a trial to expose the true nature of the war, as I could." After a long pause, he added: "If I were in that situation."

Grossman, 28, fled his Chicago home in 1972 and went to Canada where he stayed for a while at a boarding house in Toronto.

Then, last winter, he went to B.C., where he lived on Hornby Island, moving to the Okanagan for a summer job "slinging beer at the Incola Hotel." He returned to Toronto in September.

Grossman said he believes he is the first Vietnam exile to return to the U.S. without giving himself up, in a deliberate test of the 15-day "free" period.

He said he remains a U.S. citizen though a landed immigrant in Canada.

"I like Canada very much, but I have certainly another duty to work toward changing the way in which this country's business is conducted," he said.

Eye on Sky For Links To Seattle

To fill at least part of the transportation gap left by closure of the Princess Marguerite ferry service, the city of Victoria will suggest to the federal ministry of transport that better air links are needed between Victoria and Seattle.

In caucus Tuesday, city council adopted a motion by Ald. Sam Bawlf to inform the MoT that Victoria is "very desirous of fortifying" the present air routes and supports the application by Air West Airlines for increased air service to Seattle.

Mayor Peter Pollen said he had already told the company that council favors additional flights between the two centres, but added: "I also said limitations have already been reached on the use of Inner Harbor waters for taking off and landing."

Confirming that attempts by business interests to purchase and operate the Marguerite had failed, the mayor said the principal reason was the existence of "too many variables," including moorage problems and the necessity to pay "fantastic overtime" to U.S. Customs officials in Seattle.

Pollen said with the abandonment of its ferry service, Canadian Pacific appears "definitely determined" to vacate its Inner Harbor dock facilities held on a long-term lease from the federal government.

That would open up the possibility of relocating the Black Ball ferry terminal on the CP docks site and leave the Black Ball property ready for redevelopment under the harbor improvement scheme.

Meanwhile, Transport Minister Robert Strachan said Tuesday the Marguerite will not be rescued by the provincial ferry fleet.

He was responding to a suggestion by Jim Gorst (NDP—Esquimalt) that the ship be bought and operated by the province.

"Why should the government buy all the losers?" Strachan replied, declaring his first responsibility is to ensure the existing B.C. Ferries fleet meets requirements.

INSTANT INTEREST PLAN SLATED

West Coast Savings Credit Union manager Rodger Lutz today announced Vancouver Island's first instant interest deposit plan.

Investors depositing $1,000 for one year receive a $95 interest payment the day the deposit is made. Those depositing $1,000 for a three-year term would get the $250 interest payment in advance.

The program takes advantage of a change in federal taxation laws announced by Finance Minister John Turner Monday making the first $1,000 of interest income tax free. In past, deposit plans delayed interest payments as long as possible to postpone tax charges.

Lutz said the instant interest plan would be the second in British Columbia, patterned after Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, which started a similar plan earlier this month.

The interest rate for one-year term is 9.5 per cent or $95 per $1,000. Lutz said the 9.5 per cent interest will be offered at least until year's end, regardless of how far interest rates fall generally. A decline in rates is expected following a decision by Bank of Canada to reduce it rates.

Because of the interest payment in advance, yield on the $1,000 deposit for one year is 10.49 per cent and on the $250 payment in advance for a three-year deposit the yield is 10.06 per cent.

Minimum deposit is $1,000 and minimum term under the plan is one year. There is no maximum deposit restriction.

Investors will have the right to withdraw their funds at any time with a reduced rate of interest payable.

Lutz said the credit union planned to hold its rates at present levels as long as possible to attract additional deposits.

No change is expected in its loaning rates until the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation signals a decline in the mortgage rates.

85 YEARS OF SERVICE

Two men with 85 years' service between them retire this month from the B.C. Forest Service.

They are F. G. Whiting, of Victoria, and J. R. (Jack) Long, of Duncan. Both are attached to the service's Reforestation Division.

Ted began his career with the Forest Service in 1928 as a fire lookoutman in the Kettle River area. For the past 14 years he has played a leading role in B.C.'s forest camp program in which prison inmates work on a variety of forestry projects. There are 10 such camps in British Columbia.

Jack Long's service started in 1935 as a dispatcher in the ranger station at Burns Lake, where he was also busy with timber cruising, inspections and related work. He worked on development projects at Elk Falls Park, near Campbell River, and at Medicine Bowls. Early in 1939 he started specializing in nursery operations and was active in developing the Forest Service nurseries at Green Timbers, near Vancouver, and at Campbell River.

In 1945 he went to the service's nursery at Duncan as a reforestation specialist, and from there took part in nursery programs all over B.C. The Duncan complex now covers about 80 acres and this year will produce approximately nine million seedlings for the province's reforestation program.

100 Attend Sooke Meet

About 100 Sooke residents turned out Tuesday night to let the Capital Region Board know how they feel about a community plan for the area.

The meeting held in the Sooke Community Hall was the first in a series to be called by Sooke regional director Ron Dumont on the question of a community plan.

The plan would map out future development in the area and would coincide with the regional development plan for the whole Capital district which has already passed third reading by the board.

Residents at the meeting expressed concern over the protection of beaches, rivers and streams and about unsightly development in the area.

Complex Nearer

DUNCAN — After several months of financial dealing between Duncan officials and the provincial and federal governments, agreements are almost reached on details of a 132-unit senior citizens home.

The home will be located in downtown Duncan close to a hospital, an activity centre and a post office.

The city owns 10 acres where the building will be constructed, and the provincial government contributed $200,000 for the project.

Money for an architect came from the federal government.

The $2 million project was first planned early in 1974, then applications for financial help made to the two higher levels of government.

Ferry Officers and a Fair Wage

It's that time of year again, when travel plans are being hastily revised, businessmen are crossing their fingers with a nervous glance at their inventories, the provincial government is preparing to weather a storm of complaints — all because of the strong possibility of a strike on the B.C. government ferry fleet.

The 2,000 unlicenced ferry workers struck last year for five days at the height of the tourist season, creating an awesome snafu and horrendous delays for those who managed to squeeze their vehicles aboard the four remaining non-B.C. government vessels which kept running.

By holding out for more and staging an illegal strike, they eventually got a hefty wage increase that ranged from 12 to 21 per cent for various classifications, more than the rest of the civil service. A probationary steward went up to $6.15 an hour at the bottom end while chief cook's pay rose to $8.50 — making them perhaps the best-paid restaurant employees in the country. With that under their belts, this year the unlicenced workers settled without striking — although they were legally entitled to do so — for an undisclosed new contract.

This time it's the 650 licenced officers who actually operate the ferries who are unhappy and threatening to walk off the job. They rejected the government's initial offer, which reportedly was for an 11 per cent wage increase, less than that granted a year ago to the unlicenced staff who went on strike. Transport Minister Robert Strachan said then the strikers had "a gun to our heads" in explanation of the government's capitulation. He and Health Minister Dennis Cocke arranged the settlement.

The gun is still there, loaded and cocked, but now with bargaining conducted by the government's new public service commission as its negotiator the politicians have felt it safer and politically wiser to take a tougher line on this year's strike threat. There's been a lot of water under the bridge in the year since the ferry strike. The government legislated workers in another essential service back to work, and the ferry officers can take a hint.

More than that it's difficult to judge the merits of each side's arguments, mainly because the province and the B.C. Government Employees Union have adopted a policy of secrecy concerning their wage talks this year. Proposals, counter-proposals and final settlements have been kept under wraps, unlike labor-management negotiations in the private sector where the public is relatively well-informed about who said what to whom and how much.

In the provincial government, presumably the reason for secrecy is to keep one of the BCGEU's 13 components from trying to use a previous settlement with another component as a lever in an attempt to leapfrog a little higher. It's a feeble argument. All the members of a component are kept well informed as negotiations progress and it would involve no effort for a member of one to find out what happened in another. Now the public is informed by leaks and guesswork. Public money is involved; the public has a right to know.

Unfinished School Board Business

Last weekend's municipal election was generally dulcet in tone and predictable in outcome, except in the Greater Victoria school board race where voters left two incumbents trailing in fifth and sixth place and elected four virtually unknown candidates. Why the changes in this usually sleepy sector of the democratic process?

In part, younger people with children in school have a vested interest in how the board goes about its business, and correspondingly they know who they are voting for and what they want changed. But in defeating one incumbent trustee and giving another a slim margin more specific reasons probably played a large part. The four-year delay over the construction of Spectrum Community school is one possible reason. In 1970 the board planned a three-storey, 107,000 square foot school at Burnside and Acorn. Two bids of approximately $4.5 million each submitted last summer were considered and then rejected. Now the board favors another firm that would build the school under contract management.

Meanwhile, neighboring Saanich school board started planning Parkland school in February, 1972 after referendum 12 passed. Construction of the first phase began in November of the same year and the school opened in September last year. Phase one encompassed 81,000 square feet at a cost of $1.6 million. A 9,500 square foot addition has just been completed. Admittedly, the Victoria board has run into provincial government indecision regarding costs. But the fact remains Saanich brought its new school to fruition in a little more than a year and one half.

The former board also had an abrasive relation with its Canadian Union of Public Employees, which struck for three weeks last time around, and worked to rule for several weeks this fall. While it would be patently unfair to hang all these albatrosses solely on the collective necks of past board members, the public used its votes to express a general unhappiness with the way in which things were running. Thus it would seem prudent for the four new members of the Victoria board to solve the outstanding issues facing the board before they advocate their own reforms and projects.

W. A. WILSON

The Right Wing Dilemma

OTTAWA — The development of a multi-party system which still leaves much of the genuinely conservative segment of the population unrepresented is one of the oddities of this country's political life.

It is an outgrowth of the effort to make the Progressive Conservative party more progressive than conservative which followed the retirement of George Drew as its leader. After that, under John Diefenbaker and now Robert Stanfield, the party has not been truly conservative.

It seems to me that this is regrettable. Whether one shares its views or not, there is a sizable conservative constituency in this country. Its interplay with other groupings is a necessary and desirable part of political life.

Denial of Representation

The denial of representation to the conservative segment is at its most complete in Quebec, at both the federal and provincial levels, but it is not confined to that province. The virtual abdication of the Conservative party in Quebec, coupled with the decline and collapse of the Union Nationale has resulted in the unsatisfactory choice provincially between Liberals and Parti Quebecois. A non-separatist Conservative is virtually forced to vote Liberal at the present time and the efforts to provide an alternative are, so far, feeble and unimpressive.

Quebec Conservatives are not quite as badly off when federal elections are involved because the Creditistes are far more wedded to classical conservative positions than to Social Credit theory. In some Quebec ridings the Conservative party decline has been so total that the entire centre-right vote goes to Creditiste candidates.

Stanfield's belief in political miracle men, first Marcel Faribault and then Claude Wagner, has a good deal to do with this situation, but it started before he took the party's helm and shows every sign of outlasting him.

The choices put before the Canadian people by the PCs under Stanfield's leadership have not been conservative although the country's mood probably shifted somewhat to the right at the end of the Pearson era. In his first election, Stanfield tentatively put forward his guaranteed income ideas. Although the party subsequently rebuffed them, these proposals effectively provided one of the main colorations of its 1968 campaign. More recently, Stanfield and his lieutenants associated the party with the demand for all-out state intervention in the economy, represented by the support for price and incomes controls.

For the last year or so, the Liberals have actually been conducting a much more conservative economic policy than the Conservatives have been advocating. Finance Minister Turner has, in essence, been relying upon market forces to bring the economy back into a more even keel, deeply distrusting the ability of the state to intervene effectively and actually improve, rather than merely complicate, existing problems. This is one reason for the interesting rapport that has developed over the years between the finance minister and Jack Horner, the Alberta rancher who represents Crowfoot.

Horner's tactical judgments are sometimes debatable, which is one of the reasons why members of his own party have saddled him with the reputation of being a maverick. He is much more than that, however, since he is an articulate and convinced conservative. His serious speeches in the House are usually excellent statements of the views of the country's conservative element.

In a recent speech, Horner recalled his prolonged opposition to the government's farm marketing proposals a few years ago and Prime Minister Trudeau's irritation over the delays he caused.

"The prime minister went on the radio in Ottawa and said that one man held up that bill for two years. Some consumers might be pretty annoyed that that man himself did not hold it up forever . . . I said that it would not work then and I say it will not work now.

" . . . I am not against marketing boards but I do not believe that supply management will work in Canada . . . Who is so all-seeing and all-powerful on earth as to determine what should be produced where and where the product should be marketed? I am not surprised that man should decide he has the wisdom to ship eggs from Newfoundland to British Columbia and somehow or other satisfy the customer. I am sure that if the matter had been left in the hands of the Lord there would have been fresh eggs in B.C. at a cheaper price than letting man tinker with them.

Conservative Statement

"Why did it take the government two years to come to its senses and to realize this? I think the beef and hog producers are thankful the bill does not apply to them because man could have tinkered in their markets and made those markets even worse than they are today."

That, of course, is a good, down-to-earth statement of the basic conservative position, that efforts to replace ordinary market forces by state management do not work well in practice. There are other Progressive Conservative members who agree with Horner on this particular subject, of course, but that view is a long way from the faith in state intervention which was the cornerstone of the party's last election campaign.

The future philosophic position of the Conservative party is in considerable doubt because of Stanfield's decision to give up the leadership. It will remain doubtful until his successor is chosen and the party ranks are not rich in leadership talents. One of the reasons may be simply that men with a conservative cast of mind feel just as much at home in the Liberal party and have more promising futures there to boot.

". . . remember how horrible it used to be down here by Blenkinsop Creek before they put teeth in the pollution laws . . . ?"

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Disrespectful

I wish to take exception to the reference made in a recent story to ICBC employees as "girls." Presumably these are adult workers, with adult responsibilities. Vocabulary reflects attitudes. Referring to adults as girls is disrespectful, and discouraging.—Maryhelen Vicars, 214 Russell Street.

Sacred Trust

I was disturbed to read your article in the Nov. 9 issue of the Times entitled Discipline Study Group Favors Strap. It seemed to me after reading it that the three mothers who voiced strong disagreement were in the losing minority along with Dr. Ney who supported their position with his statement: "I've seen a lot of battered children who have almost been killed by their parents" and added that it is a fact that most of these parents suffered corporal punishment as a child.

I do not want to make this letter a plea against corporal punishment as much as I would like to lend support to those mothers who regard this trend as a failure on the part of parent or teacher to handle the situation in a better way.

We live in a climate of eroding values and against such a background, our own personal values seem so frail and insubstantial, but I submit that they are the greatest strength we have as parents. They may not be lived up to all the time, parents are human beings, not saints, but it is the attempt that counts. I also submit that in these days of phoney values imposed on us in large part by television commercials, it is important to differentiate between what is socially acceptable and what is morally acceptable.

Just as honesty, truthfulness and unselfishness are more a matter of example than a concept to be taught, so discipline cannot be meted out by those who do not discipline themselves.

To every despairing mother I offer this exercise: Hold each child in your mind clearly and distinctly every night and morning, not with desire to change or punish or rebuke, but to try to see the deeper essence which lies within each one of us. Sense this rather than materialize it, bless them and give them your love.

I think that most people realize that corporal punishment will not cure the problem, but will compound it and create more problems at a later date. Corporal punishment tends to be more of an emotional outlet for the frustrated and despairing adult.

I am not in a position to offer an alternative, I only know that my husband and I feel gratitude to all the teachers who gave our children a feeling of self-respect. Those teachers all tended to have three things in common: competence in their area, a strong personal moral code and a sense of humor.

Children today need all the love we can give them to face the future which cannot possibly hold as much material security for them as it did for us. In other words an over populated world of scarcity is what all children face today. Let us therefore view them as a sacred trust for to them belongs the future of mankind. — Rosamund M. J. Sorenson, 99 Gorge Road West.

Farewell Downtown

I wonder how many frustrated and deafened shoppers have made up their minds this week to do their Christmas shopping and other business at the shopping centres or even in Vancouver, rather than brave the chaotic, noisy, time-consuming conditions brought about downtown by someone's brilliant decision to dig up almost every street in the core area at one and the same time?

Over half an hour to travel 10 blocks! New York in the morning rush-hour? Shanghai in the bad old days! No! Victoria in the throes of a beautification program. Where are those well-paid professional thinkers whose specialty it is to foresee such boondoggles?

Any visitor to Toronto will be impressed by the fast, five-to-ten-minute bus service which makes it a pleasure, both day and night, to leave one's car at home. In God's name when will somone see that if such a service were instituted in Victoria it might initially operate at a loss, but that once established it would be as heavily used as the B.C. Ferries now are, despite the claim by C.P.R. in the old days that an expanded system could not be made to pay.

Until then, "farewell downtown!" I'll keep my sanity and shop elsewhere. And believe me, I'm not the only one! — J. B. Smith, P.O. Box 1321.

Moral Example

Recently a notice in a local store window bade us: "Remember them. Because of them we live in peace in Canada."

But is it enough to live in peace in Canada? To be real, peace must be indivisible. Dr. David Suzuki, geneticist, University of B.C., addressed a gathering last summer on another Remembrance Day. "On August 9, 1945, the second atomic bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, killing 100,000 people in a flash. The first, dropped on Hiroshima three days earlier, killed 200,000.

"Today, 29 years later, up to 340,000 people are still suffering and dying as a result of those two explosions. Last year alone 2,600 new names were added to the memorial list at Hiroshima.

EMIKO TAKEMOTO
. . . Hiroshima survivor

"Since 1945, nuclear weapons have grown over 1,000 times as powerful, and now we hear of neutron bombs with even greater potential for destruction."

Dr. Suzuki cites some of George Wald's ideas. Wald wrote of the time of the dinosaurs, largest creatures on earth and armed to the teeth. Their one flaw — a very low brain to brawn ratio. They disappeared.

When man appeared, less than five million years ago, "he lacked size, armor, claws, fangs, or spikes, but he had the highest brain to brawn ratio on earth, and it brought him to dominance."

Then, less than 100 years ago, man invented the motor-car, and his brain to brawn ratio began to fall. He went on to make guns, tanks, bombs, planes, and nuclear weapons. With each invention, says Wald, his brain to brawn ratio sinks toward that of the great reptiles.

"But we aren't gathered here," Dr. Suzuki told his audience, "to mourn the dead of two Japanese cities. As many were killed by the fire-bombing of Tokyo and the saturation bombing of Dresden. It is estimated that tens of millions of Africans have died of starvation over the past 10 years . . ."

We remember the Japanese cities, he believes, because of two new things: (1) the nuclear bombs were dropped on people of a different race than ours; (2) "The survivors were marked by radiation . . . War now extracts a hereditary reparation from the yet unborn and their children's children . . . Such weapons represent an outrage to human dignity and intelligence."

Can Canada do anything to halt mankind's swift retrogression toward another great-brute age? Not, says Dr. Suzuki, while we still harbor nuclear weapons at Comox, while we still retain a commitment to NATO and NORAD, while we still support chemical and biological warfare research.

(How many of us feel helpless rage whenever we pay our taxes and remember that out of them comes the money to support that obscene germ factory at Suffield, Alberta?)

But we could, Dr. Suzuki believes, do something very real if we, as a nation, rejected all involvement with such treaties and such weapons.

We could set a continuing moral example which the whole world would notice.

Reviving, ones hopes a lesson of love once taught by a man on a cross. — Frances Wilcox, 820 Cook Street.

Democracy Upheld

Contrary to statements made by certain B.C. School Trustees' Association members and members of our local board, democracy was indeed upheld by the introduction of Bill 173 by the Minister of Education.

Prior to the introduction of this bill the B.C. School Trustees' Association was contravening the intent of the Public Schools Act and attempting to force teachers into a provincial bargaining situation which was unpalatable to local teachers. Because the BCSTA had terminated contracts in all districts in which it was named as the bargaining agent (Victoria was one) some districts may have ended this year with no contract at all and thereby have lost clauses which associations have taken years to achieve.

We are extremely pleased with the minister's recent action and suggest that this legislation has warded off further confrontation between teachers and trustees.

The minister made it very clear that this was interim legislation intending to clarify and uphold the present law.

The Greater Victoria Teachers' Association now hopes to once again be able to negotiate with the trustees of this district. — Mavis De Girolamo, President, Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

CBC Bias

On the radio news it was reported that a member of Parliament, Patrick Nowlan, stated that the CBC had rejected a television program "Kruschev Remembers" which they had previously advertised. He stated, further, that they had formerly rejected a program in 1972 about the workings of the KGB.

Observing that CBC television and radio e.g. "As It Happens" invites criticism of the Pentagon, the CIA, and U.S. Government on a regular basis, one wonders who manipulates the CBC. — Helma Campbell, 3170 Beach Drive.

From the Times of November 20, 1914

The Times published three pages of special features on present-day life in Victoria and the progress made in the 70 years since the city was founded. "We invite attention to the special articles appearing in today's issue of the Times setting forth the advantages of Victoria. They disclose a combination of attractive features unsurpassed by any city on the continent or anywhere else. They deal with the current year in which as everybody knows business conditions have been sub-normal and we have such confidence in the stability of our city . . . that no community in the Dominion will respond more readily to the revival to which the whole country is looking."

To Hang or Not . . . That's the Dilemma

By JACK WASSERMAN
The Sun

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's Liberal cabinet will now be faced with its most important single decision — perhaps with the exception of the October crisis — as a result of a New Westminster Assize Court jury's acceptance of the overwhelming evidence that two men went out to kill a cop last March. And did.

To hang or not to hang John Harvey Miller, 29, and John Roger Cockriell, 19? For a variety of reasons, the answer to that question will have a major impact on the social fabric of Canadian life.

Whatever trauma the jury experienced in bringing in its verdict, it will be as nothing compared to the soul-searching that must be done by members of the fedeal cabinet who will have to decide on whether to commute the death sentence that the law required Mr. Justice Kirke Smith to impose upon the two men who, the jury decided, gunned down a young Mountie with malice aforethought.

The national significance of this particular case arises directly from the arguments that led to the introduction of the present law in 1969. The law eliminated the death penalty for murder, except in the case of the slaying of a prison guard or a police officer.

The decision came long after the fact. Nobody has been put to death for murder in Canada since the early 1960s. The last hanging in B.C. was in 1961. Until the law was changed many years later, all death sentences had been commuted. The B.C. experience has been that nobody under 21 has been executed for murder since 1952.

When the issue of capital punishment — to which many of us objected violently — came down to the crunch, the single most important argument came from policemen and prison guards who insisted that they'd be sitting ducks if the death penalty was eliminated.

They argued that the average citizen might never meet a murderer but policemen and prison guards, by the nature of their work, were forced to deal directly with such people. The result, they insisted, would be that they were directly exposed to persons who had already killed and would have nothing to lose if they killed again.

Then-justice minister John Turner bought the argument, and capital punishment for the specific offence involving policemen and prison guards remained.

Even then, the death sentence wasn't automatic, as demonstrated by a B.C. case where two young men killed a guard while escaping from the local upcountry lock-up. They hit him on the head but they didn't intend to kill, they said. He had a soft skull. The death sentences were commuted.

But in the present case, which is probably unprecedented in modern legal history, the jury accepted the evidence that the two men set out with the cold-blooded intention of killing a cop. With all due respect to the evidence about drugs, booze, and social retardation, there didn't seem to be any extenuating circumstance. They were also represented by two of the most competent defence counsel available in B.C.

The cabinet's decision will undoubtedly be complicated by the fact that one of the convicted men is an Indian. There is also the implied promise to law enforcement agencies in the provision for execution in cases of this type.

Two more policemen have been shot down since young Roger Pierlet died on the side of a road in Surrey last March 29. A man awaits trial in one case, while Quebec police still seek the confessed killer of a Montreal policeman in a second case.

As a reporter who has witnessed his share of hangings — how else does one become opposed to the entire idea of capital punishment? — I'm not about to call out the lynch mob.

But I am dreadfully concerned about the effect on policemen if the death sentences are commuted. Not that they will be surprised. If my policemen friends are typical, they are already resigned to the proposition that the death sentences in this case will be commuted. They're not even bitter. They know the history as well as I do. When a casual bystander suggests that the the two Surrey murders will hang, any policeman hearing the statement will simply reply "Wanna' bet?"

It isn't that the cops are blood-thirsty. With the exception of the occasional "professional killer" inadvertently recruited in the past, most of the policemen I know are as appalled by the idea of killing as any of us. They feel self-conscious when they release the trap on their holster, because, TV notwithstanding, the idea of pulling their gun in anger upsets the hell out of them. I know guys who have been out on the beat for 15 or 20 years in this town who have yet to draw their guns in the line of duty.

But that's what bugs them. They figure that if policemen are about to be legitimized as targets, they'll have their guns out on every occasion. And if in doubt, it will be a matter of shooting first and asking questions later; if their quarry is in any condition to answer. That's been the American experience and there is considerable data to support the argument that nervous policemen are trigger-happy policemen and a lot more people get killed, including totally innocent suspects who make a wrong move.

So that's the situation facing the Ottawa politicians. There has never been a more solid set of facts that puts the case directly within the provisions of the existing law. This is the case that will truly test the cabinet. Its members must decide a question that is by turns, philosophical, social and racial, not to mention political in terms of the redneck pressures that will be dredged up from the depths of human experience.

Easy? Well what would you decide if you were required to be present at Oakalla at one minute after midnight on Jan. 28, in a small bare room with a hook hanging from the ceiling over two metal plates covering an elevator shaft that has been unused — for any purpose — since 1961?

What a hell of a mess!

Hunger: Where's Sense of Urgency?

By JAMES EAYRS

Suppose we were to hear that, overnight, Central Europe has been shattered by an outbreak of thermonuclear war.

Not a major outbreak, not what Herman Kahn is pleased to call "Spasm or insenate war": Just a limited, brief and controlled exchange of a score or so of intermediate range ballistic missiles. These reduce Hamburg and Lodz, Frankfurt and Pilsen, to rubble, kill five million people outright, leave in the ruins millions of others fearfully and most fatally wounded and diseased by radiation burns and sickness.

There is a sequel to this scenario.

The thermonuclear exchange, small-scale though it is compared to the globe-annihilating capability of the super-powers' arsenals, has released into the atmosphere deadly radioactivity which in due course will fall on North America.

How would a university respond to circumstances as dire as these? What would a university do? What should a university do?

Perhaps its president convenes a prayer meeting in its convocation hall where assorted sages bewail the passing of civilization as we have known it, theologians ask God for blessing, the varsity band plays "Abide With Me".

A response in better style would be to go on with the business at hand, like the stiff-upper-lip types in Neville Shute's On the Beach. Carry on teaching, carry on learning, carry on Beowulf and Chaucer, carry on transplanting corneas and cloning frogs.

The best response would be for the university to suspend its preoccupations of the moment — important as some of these may be. Classroom and laboratory, seminar and workshop, should go into a kind of emergency session so that members of the academy in every discipline and stage of learning can try to answer the two over-riding questions: How has such a disaster been allowed to happen? And: What must be done to insure that it can never happen again?

These dark thoughts came to mind last week as the result of reading, in harrowing counter-point, reports from the scene of a starving Bangladesh and reports from the scene of a floundering World Food Conference.

What is happening in Bangladesh — a people of seventy millions sliding over the abyss into possibly irremediable disaster, a people enacting before our eyes the Malthusian psychodrama between Nature and Fecundidty — can be compared with the disasters of war.

But there are no prayer meetings in halls of Western culture, no stiff upper lips in response to premonition of what dread fate may lie in store, no emergency sessions of the academy.

Images of emaciation seem to have lost their power to shock — certainly their power to galvanize. We've seen them all before — ribs jutting from the torsos of babies and old men like timbers of an abandoned dory, anatomies of melancholy.

It's the old Biafra footage — except the victims aren't so black.

But the juxtaposition of these two tragedies — mass starvation in the Third World, the diplomatic grande bouffe in Rome — has helped to turn public attention upon the politics of protein.

Much of the credit for any stirrings of conscience in this country should go to the team of Canadian Church observers in Rome. Its members, Catholic and Protestant, have been monitoring the World Food Conference throughout the 10 days of its proceedings. They have paid particular attention to the work of the Canadian delegation there — its quiet diplomacy no less than its public rhetoric. What they have observed is disquieting.

In their Report No. 3, dated November 8, the Canadian Church Observers rebuke the leader of the Canadian delegation, Secretary of State for External Affairs Allan MacEachen, for having promised the conference that "where Canada can help to make these problems more manageable" — he was referring to the drastic world-wide shortage of nitrogen fertilizer — "it will".

That statement, the Canadian Church Observers charge, is composed of "empty words". Canada, which gave 150,000 metric tons of nitrogen fertilizer in 1970, is to give nothing this year. The explanation offered by the Canadian government for its inaction on this front is that there is not enough nitrogen fertilizer to meet the needs of our own farmers. But, note the Canadian Church Observers, in 1973-74 30 per cent of Canadian production was exported, mostly to the United States. And 10 or 15 per cent of our nitrogen fertilizer is used on golf-courses and lawns.

In their Report No. 4, of November 12, the Canadian Church Observers reveal Canada's role in side-tracking the proposals on trade advanced by the delegations of no fewer than 77 less developed countries. The United states delegation, as hard of nose as Durham No. 1 wheat is hard of seed, wanted to reject the proposals outright. "Canada suggested that such a move would look like a deliberate block and proposed instead that each developed country get up and make long speeches. In effect, this was a call to filibuster." The tactic was tried, and it succeeded. Protests from less developed countries did not reach the ears of the Canadian delegates, the Canadian Church Observers report, "because they were discussing among themselves with their earphones off".

In an analysis of the major statement of the Canadian position delivered at the Conference by Secretary of State for External Affairs MacEachen, the Canadian Church Observers conclude: "In sum, the world food crisis today demands fundamental changes in the international economic system. In relation to the hard-line position taken by the United States, the Canadian position looks good, but in relation to the massive human needs in the world today the Canadian response falls far short of the leadership that is needed".

While brooding over these dispiriting dispatches, I received a letter from the High Commissioner to Canada of the People's Republic of Bangladesh. He would be coming to Toronto. Could we meet and talk?

I did not think the day would come when I would in good conscience turn over a class to a propagandist from a foreign country. That day came last week. The High Commissioner spoke to my class in international relations on Bangladesh and the World Food Conference. In one Varsity classroom, at least, a crisis of relevance had been resolved — at the expense, it may be, of the scholarly proprieties and priorities.

But I did it — and I'm glad.

Smiling to Catastrophe

By NAN ROBERTSON

PARIS — The mood of France, particularly Paris, could be compared these days to the great liner named after this country, whose passengers ate and drank her out of existence.

The Liner France, one of the most luxurious and carefree places in a forbidding world, was recently taken out of service.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing has warned that "all the curves are leading us to catastrophe" during the worldwide economic crisis.

He has asked the country, smiling the while, to give him time and, somehow, everything will work itself out. He has been dubbed "the happy Cassandra."

If some of the faces in the Paris subway are glum, the stores and sidewalks are full of people lugging bulging plastic shopping bags. The French continue to amuse themselves lustily.

They queue up for movies — especially those that are erotic or violent. They pack restaurants and cafes and concerts and art shows and flood the highways with their cars.

At the end of the recent three-day All Saints holiday, returning automobiles stretched bumper-to-bumper for 30 miles on the superhighway from the south.

Yet it is also obvious that the French are discontent without being panicky. They see no clear-cut approaches by their government to rising prices, falling employment and strikes that have paralyzed mail delivery and other essential services.

The Socialist-Communist left warned last spring, after barely losing the Presidential election, that Giscard de'Estaing would have labor trouble in the fall. And he has. Strikes are a seasonal feature of autumn here, like rain is in April and political truces in summer.

. . . asks for time

But these strikes, engaging by turn railway, gas and electricity workers, civil servants, bus drivers, coal miners, printers, broadcasters, fuel-oil distributors and, for a month now, the entire postal and telecommunications system, are becoming fiercer and more political than before.

The unions last month won an historic agreement that guarantees wage earners a year's pay if they are laid off for economic reasons. Still, this does not seem to reassure the French, who have been repeatedly described by labor experts as "neurotic" at the thought of losing their jobs. The National Institute of Statistics, however, has just confirmed that the economy is indeed slowing down. People are responding in droves to "help wanted" ads.

More than 500,000 workers in a force of 20 million are unemployed, up 20 per cent from last year. That seems little by American standards but France has long been used to almost zero unemployment. There are renewed fears that the total here may reach 750,000 by the end of 1974.

President Giscard d'Estaing is being attacked from all sides. Empoyers are worried by the proposed new tax on inflationary profits. Small and medium businesses have said they are being crushed because of severe credit restrictions.

Giscard d'Estaing has insisted that time is working for France. Jose Bidegain disagrees. He is the head of the National Employers Association and deplores the "lack of backbone" in the government's reaction to the crisis.

What appears to be unsettling the French in every quarter is the President's "wait and see" attitude. He is accused of procrastinating and of substituting style for substance.

He changes the tempo of the "Marseillaise," he goes to De Gaulle's grave to show he is faithful to the general's credos, he spends 24 hours aboard an atomic submarine to affirm his faith in France's nuclear deterrent force.

"What does he take us for — a bunch of dumb clucks?" one old woman rhetorically asked another on a Paris street corner this past week.

Seller's Market Expected If Mortgage Rates Drop

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Victoria real estate prices are at a low ebb but the industry is quietly hopeful prices may stop dropping now that the federal budget has been released.

The budget was a signal for a reduction in interest rates generally, with a reduction in the mortgage rate expected to be not far down the road.

"There is a rumor already going the rounds that the mortgage rate will fall about half a point very soon," says Al Lee, manager of the Shelbourne branch of Block Bros.

He said the industry expects the mortgage rate to fall to about 11.75 per cent from its present average of 12.25 per cent.

This, along with an increase in the amount of mortgage funds available, would be enough to turn the real estate market around and bring back the seller's market.

At present it is very much a buyer's market.

Real estate advertisements tell the story. In a single day, the following price reductions were announced by various selling agencies'

A new de luxe three-bedroom home reduced $4,500 to $59,900.

A view home in Brentwood reduced $10,000.

A five-bedroom home reduced $4,000 to $69,900.

An executive home in Broadmead reduced $5,400 in price to $79,500.

A two-bedroom home with swimming pool reduced $4,000.

A three-bedroom, full-basement home reduced $1,000 to $34,900.

Lee said the main reason for a lack of buyers at the present time was the high monthly payments necessary when mortgage interest rates are 12 per cent or more. He said government regulations only permit a fixed amount of money that may be spent on mortgage payments in relation to salary and other expenses.

Fewer and fewer families were qualifying because they had to meet payments for cars and other commodities at the same time. The expected rate reduction, however, reduces the monthly mortgage payment.

It was the signal for a decline in interest rates that would help the industry most. The provision to make $1,000 per year tax-free if saved to buy a first house would be of little benefit to the real estate industry, Lee said.

It would take 10 years to put together $10,0000 at that rate, a long time to wait for a house. Before that time, with less than $10,000 a family would have difficulty buying a house.

Under present market conditions, a minimum down payment of from $10,000 to $15,000 is needed, he said.

Even buying an older house is not a solution to the money problem, because a $30,000 house usually requires renovations of something approaching $10,000 to bring it up to modern standards, he said.

Lee said the reduction in the building material tax to 5 per cent from 11 per cent would have a minor effect on house prices.

There was some indication from contractors that they were already in the process of absorbing these savings.

(Earlier, Wayne Farmer, president of the British Columbia Construction Association, predicted the saving provided by the tax cut would be overtaken by increasing costs of materials and labor before summer.)

Lee said if the federal government seriously wanted to reduce building costs, it should find some solution to the red tape that sometimes holds up developments for three or four years, adding to construction costs.

He said some system should be devised to make intergovernmental approval possible within three months of a subdivision proposal.

Every month of waiting time adds to the end cost of a building, he said.

BANK OF B.C. REVENUE UP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia's balance of revenue for the year ended Oct. 31 increased by 40.3 per cent from the previous year, the bank reported Tuesday.

Balance of revenue before taxes was $1.8 million this year compared with $1.3 million in the year ended Oct. 31, 1973; after-tax revenue rose 31.6 per cent to $873,700 from $663,800.

Total assets were $482 million compared with $318 million the previous year.

The Vancouver-based bank's balance of payments — the amount left for shareholders after appropriations for losses — was $324,700 compared with $413,800 the previous year.

Albert Hall, chairman and chief executive officer, said the strong growth in assets and earnings has permitted the bank to set aside the maximum amount permitted of tax-free accumulated appropriations for losses.

As a result, he said, a reduced amount will be set aside next year, leaving more funds to add to a balance of profits.

The bank has approved a semi-annual dividend policy for fiscal 1975, Hall said.

The bank announced Tuesday it has reduced its prime lending rate by one-half per cent to 11 per cent, effective immediately.

The bank also reduced the rate charged on small business loans to 10½ per cent from 10¾ per cent, also effective immediately and will reduce the interest paid on non-chequing savings accounts to 8¾ from 9¼ per cent effective Dec. 1.

Weldwood

Sales of Weldwood of Canada Ltd. rose 11 per cent to a record $213 million in the first nine months of 1974, from $191.9 million a year earlier, but net earnings declined.

Net earnings were $9,518,000 or $1.86 a share compared with $10,872,000 or $2.14 a share in 1973.

Third-quarter sales were $63 million compared with $62.3 million a year earlier. Net income in the quarter slumped 58 per cent to $1,060,000 or 18 cents a share from $2,536,000 or 49 cents a share in 1973.

at a high level in the final Bowell, said that without its pulp operations, Weldwood's sales and earnings, especially in the third quarter, would have declined more noticably.

Bowell said world demand for pulp is expected to remain at a high level in the final quarter, but demand for lumber in the United States in the latest quarter "was almost non-existent." Sluggish overseas and domestic plywood markets reflected the depressed state of residential construction.

Alta. Natural Gas

Alberta Natural Gas Co. $1,765,000 or $1.48 per share for the first nine months of 1974, up from $1,589,000 or $1.33 per share for the same period a year ago.

A statement by the company indicates continued support of the Canadian Arctic Gas Study Ltd. project to construct a natural gas pipeline from the Mackenzie Delta and Alaska to Canadian and U.S. markets.

"Alberta Natural considers this project to be the most advantageous of all alternatives to transport gas from the Arctic," said the company.

Greyhound Lines

Greyhound Lines of Canada Ltd. of Calgary has reported net earnings of $5,638,301 or $2.21 per share for the first nine months of 1974, compared to net earnings of $6,006,027 or $1.29 for the same period last year.

The highlight of company operations this year was the expansion of Greyhound's manufacturing subsidiary, Motor Coach Industries Ltd. of Winnipeg, said Greyhound president R. L. Borden.

The $1.7-million expansion city buses per year. Motor Coach's capacity to making 1,200 MC-8 and 150 MC-8 intercity buses per year. Motoro Coach's buses are sold in Canada, the United States, Mexico and Australia.

Inland Natural Gas

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. has reported a net loss of $426,609 for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1974 in the first quarter of its fiscal year, compared with a loss of $104,086 for the same period a year earlier.

Revenue from gas sales was $4,930,737 compared with $3,981,549 a year earlier. Inland said the gain in sales was due entirely to a rate increase which went into effect Feb. 1, 1974 to offset an equivalent increase in gas purchase costs.

Revenue from gas sales in the latest three months, however, was 13 per cent below the company's forecast, because of warmer than normal weather.

Inland has added approximately 5,500 residential and commercial customers since Sept. 30, 1973, but sales in the 1974 quarter were only marginally ahead of a year earlier.

Poor market conditions in the lumber industry also had a detrimental effect on Inland's small industrial customers. Large industrial volumes were materially affected by a prolonged strike at Cominco Ltd., a major customer.

BUSINESS SECURITY IN TALK

How to spot fraud and prevent shoplifting will be discussed tonight at the Westwind International Motor Inn, 741 Goldstream.

All Colwood and Langford businessmen are invited to the RCMP-sponsored meeting, which begins at 7 p.m.

Const. Don Alexander, community relations officer with the Colwood RCMP detachment, said the discussion is part of the force's crime prevention program.

Alexander will also offer tips on general business security.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who falsely reported an accident to police was fined $100 in provincial court Tuesday for committing public mischief.

Rod Wayne Weisbrodt, 20, of 951 Bay, told police Oct. 23 a car owned by his sister had been struck while parked in the 700-block Pandora by a "hit and run" driver.

Police investigation revealed that the Weisbrodt car had been involved in a hit-and-run accident on a Pandora parking lot.

When questioned by police, Weisbrodt admitted that after the collision on the lot he suggested he would protect the driver of his sister's car by moving it on to the street and telling police the damage had been caused by a hit-and-run vehicle.

Weisbrodt was also fined $25 for allowing an unlicensed minor to drive.

He pleaded guilty to both offences.

In two cases of possesssing marijuana where the Crown proceeded by indictment rather than in the less serious summary manner, one-day jail terms and $250 fines were handed out. Sentenced were Stephen Gordon Higden, 22, of Vancouver, and Teresa Adams, 20, of 225 Quebec.

A charge against Higden of possessing LSD for the purpose of trafficking was withdrawn, and a charge against Adams of possessing the drug was dismissed after Judge William Ostler noted a document in the case had been improperly worded.

In other drug cases, Jack Joseph Dorchak, 17, of Port Renfrew, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for possessing marijuana.

And Richard Wayne Lesoway, 25, of 76 Moss, was fined $75 for possessing the same drug.

Joseph Gyorffy, 28, of 1608 Poplar, was fined $75 for shoplifting a pair of swim trunks worth $3 July 26 from The Bay.

David Telfer Powell, 24, of 1040 North Park, was given a 20-day jail sentence to serve on weekends, six months' probation and a nine month driving ban, and another four day's on weekends for driving while under suspension.

Neal Middler, 24, of 6678 Buena Vista,, was given a 30-day jail sentence, a one-year ban and six months' probation.

Our Wandering VC Home

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's "wandering Victoria Cross," in Britain since the death of its recipient in 1961, has come home to the Royal Canadian Military Institute.

Uranium millionaire Stephen Roman, chairman of Denison Mines Ltd., presented the Commonwealth's highest award for bravery to the institute after he bought it at a London auction in July for $13,800.

The bronze cross was awarded to Capt. (then Lieut.) Edward Bellew, 33, for valor on April 24, 1915.

Capt. Bellew continued to fire his machine-gun until it ran out of ammunition in the face of overwhelming enemy strength. With his sergeant dead beside him, Bellew seized a rifle and fought until he was taken prisoner.

His deeds won him the second or third Victoria Cross given to a Canadian in the First World War—the first one was awarded to Fred Fisher of St. Catharines, Ont., the day before. Sgt.-Maj. Fred Hall of the 8th battalion, CEF, won a VC the same day as Capt. Bellew.

Capt. Bellew, a Briton born in Bombay and member of the British Columbia Regiment of the 7th battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, died in Kamloops, B.C., and his Victoria Cross crossed the ocean again to a relative.

The VC is the first ever owned by the Royal Canadian Military Institute, a club for 2,427 former and serving officers.

Mr. Roman had received requests for the medal from eight groups but decided the "institute had the proper approach."

The institute will share the medal 11 months of the year with museums across the country and house it here for the 12th month.

Liquor Cut-Off In Sentence

NANAIMO (CP) — Brian Nosek, 26, of Surrey, was sentenced to one year in jail Monday after being found guilty of criminal negligence causing death. Nosek was also prohibited from use of liquor for five years following the completion of his sentence. Nosek was driver of a car which struck another vehicle on the Island Highway, killing two people April 14.

48 FACING CHARGES OVER ITALIAN CHOLERA FLARE

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Fort-eight persons, including the head of the Naples port and a former government official, have been ordered to stand trial in investigations resulting from the 1973 cholera outbreak that killed more than 20 persons.

An investigating magistrate charged 39 mussel growers with selling food posing a health hazard and nine state officials with not performing their duties to regulate the mussel business.

But experts ruled out a direct link between mussels and cholera. They said the polluted mussels were to blame for other contagious diseases around Naples, such as typhoid fever and hepatitis.

Hundreds of Neapolitans suffered from cholera during the summer of 1973 in an outbreak which many then blamed on mussels grown in polluted waters.

Mussel and other shellfish were banned for several months, and police destroyed hundreds of tons of mussels grown in the port where Naples discharges its sewage unprocessed.

175 More Mounties Promised To Bolster Coverage in B.C.

RCMP manpower in the province will be increased by 175 officers this fiscal year and "hopefully, considerably more" next year, Assistant Commissioner Ed Willes said in an interview Tuesday.

Willes declined to say how many more men he would be seeking because 1975 contract negotiations have not been completed with the provincial government.

He said the planning for this year's allotment was done more than a year ago and is on par with additions made to the force over the past five years.

If the request for an augmented yearly recruitment is approved, he said, "We should get caught up with the national average within three years."

The B.C. Police Commission, under Dr. John Hogarth, has said the RCMP strength in the province is 350 officers short of the national average based on a police-to-population ratio.

And that figure only applies to the 1,200-member provincial force. It does not include the 2,000 RCMP officers who man detachments under direct contract to municipalities.

Willes said the commission's figure was a "reasonable estimate."

He said no study has been completed on how many more men would be required to bring municipal RCMP forces up to the national level.

However, there are indications the police manpower shortage in the province is in the range of 1,700 to 1,800 below the national level based on police to number of Criminal code offences.

REFLECTING on 42 years of community service, G. Stanley Eden of 3115 Wascana admires silver tray presented him this week by Saanich council. A member of the police commission for 34 years and an alderman for eight, Eden told council aldermen got their "boxing practice" at election meetings during his days. He recalled the 1920s when meetings were packed and bands of hecklers flourished.

Geographical impossibility notwithstanding, the Empress Hotel has been awarded the Diploma of European Excellence.

GRAY

From a CP Hotels handout, we learn that the honor was bestowed by the Committee of European Excellence, "an association created in France to recognize quality and excellence in all fields of acitvity."

Recipients of the award—including the Pierre Hotel in New York, the Stanford Court in San Francisco and the Beverly Wilshire in Beverly Hills—are establishments "instrumental in furthering the cultural and economic development of their respective countries, while respecting a European tradition of quality," the press release says with due solemnity.

Well, bully for The Empress and manager Bill Gray. Now is there, we can't help wondering, a Diploma of Canadian Excellence to mark observance of "a Canadian tradition of quality?"

In some respects, Mayor Peter Pollen displays a bewildering tendency to be consistently inconsistent.

Consider, for example, his stand on the whole question of abolishing automatic voting rights for businesses, absentee landlords and property owners in municipal elections.

Almost exactly a year ago, Pollen roundly denounced the legislation as "frightening," and agreed with other members of city council that it unfairly disenfranchised the business community.

Deprived of a business vote himself, because his automobile dealership is in the city but he lives in Oak Bay, Pollen said at that time: "You can lead an army but you can't have anything to do with it."

But by last week the mayor's opinions seemed to have travelled full-circle. He scoffed at downtown businessmen for voicing concern on the matter, when before the changes they had not deplored the fact that some business owners had been entitled to five, six or more votes.

Said Pollen to council (did any of them recall his comments of a year ago?): "I think this example of disenfranchisement is a good thing. Those who live in a city should control the city."

Will he change his mind again before he vacates the mayor's seat next November?

Even the Junior Chamber of Commerce suffers from apathy.

Newsletter editor Bill Hyde chastized the membership in the November publication. It appears that out of an already-small membership of 29, the last general meeting drew a turnout of only 11 to hear speaker Bob Tipple of PNE fame.

Saanich alderman Mel Couvelier, piqued when a radio commentator criticized Saanich aldermen for being colorless, is going to do something about it.

He and Alderman Joe Bourque are taking to color television, co-chairing a show "Saanich Issues", to be held at 9 p.m. on Channel 10 every other Thursday, beginning Jan. 9.

It is hoped Saanich residents will take an active part in the open-line sessions, which will replace the open forum meetings, held in the afternoon at municipal hall earlier this year.

Other aldermen and municipal staff will also appear.

"It's going to be in color," Bourque said. "We should wear our brightest smiles."

"It will be colorful alright," Alderman Fred Severson quipped, after Lum said such issues as property tax loads, the housing crisis and impact on neighborhood values would be aired.

If Rain Had Been Snow . . .

Clouds over Victoria this week have dropped more than an inch of rain to bring the November rainfall total to more than five inches at the airport.

If all that had been snow Victorians would be trudging through more than three feet of it now, according to a weather office spokesman.

This year's November precipitation is just over that of 1973 though some of last year's was snow.

Total rainfall for 1974 so far is 28.5 inches at the airport and about 20.5 inches at the Gonzales weather station.

Early Start Predicted On Spectrum

Work will likely begin early next year on the new building for Spectrum community secondary school, Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn predicted today.

The project finally won approval Tuesday of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, but Bunn said the working out of final details with the education department and contractor Wiliam Campbell will take several more weeks.

The three-storey building at Burnside and Acorn will probably be ready for occupancy in September 1976, he said.

Dailly has approved expenditure of $3.5 million on the building, plus an unspecified amount for site development to be negotiated by the board and education department.

Total construction cost could be closer to $4.5 million.

Spectrum school will remain temporarily located at the Mt. View school building on Carey Rd. until the new building opens.

Glazier Housing Leader?

Victoria alderman-elect Murray Glazier appears destined for the important housing portfolio on city council when he starts his civic duties in January.

Only three days after his first-attempt success in Saturday's civic election, Glazier was present at council's regular Tuesday afternoon caucus meeting by invitation of Mayor Peter Pollen.

It was the first time in recent years that any neophyte alderman has attended meetings in an observer capacity prior to being sworn in — the traditional assumption-of-office ceremony which takes place at council's first meeting of the New Year.

Pollen explained to other council members: "I thought it was a good idea to have the incumbents get together with the new guys so we can have an orderly transition."

Later in the meeting, moments after a brief mention of tonight's public hearing on the Neighborhood Improvement Program for James Bay and Victoria West, Pollen appeared to be referring to Glazier when he said in an aside to an alderman:

"It makes sense to have him here as he's going to be taking this over."

Defeated incumbent Ald. Percy Frampton is currently responsible, as housing committee chairman, for steering the NIP proposals throuh to a firm adoption of spending priorities in the two neighborhoods.

The city's list has to be completed by Nov. 30 for submission to Ottawa, but the program's implementation will be spread over the next two years at least.

'Dishonest' Builders Target in Saanich

Saanich will get tough with dishonest, fly-by-night contractors.

On the recommendation of development engineer J. R. Walker, much heavier fines will be sought for infractions of the building and licence bylaws.

The amount of permit fees and supporting surety bonds will be substantially increased.

Development engineer J. R. Walker told the public works committee Tuesday:

"There is a definite burden on the municipality and its employees to act aggressively and efficiently in the enforcement of the building bylaw. (See also Page 2.)

"Our concern here is that too many cases arise where dishonest or irresponsible builders fail to call for the staged inspections set out clearly in the building code and proceed to sell houses for which occupancy permits have not been granted. In many cases, the new homeowner looks to us to force the original builder to return and make good deficiencies. In few cases we have been successful."

Walker recommended that the minimum fine for first offences be raised from $25 to $100 and the maximum for first offences, from $300 to $500. Subsequent offences should be raised from $50 minimum to $250 minimum and $300 maximum to $750.

Walker said this would remove the "gambling licence" now being enjoyed by builders who broke the rules, taking the risk of being taken to court for a minimum fine. The courts, he said, rarely levied more than the minimum penalty on the offenders.

The committee also agreed with Walker that the scale of building and plumbing permit fees was far too low.

Walker said the inspection department was costing Saanich $190,000 a year while revenues from permits amounted only to between $85,000 and $90,000.

Mayor Ed Lum agreed with Walker's assertion that requirements for a tradesman's licence should be "tightened up."

Fugitive Near RCMP Office

One of Canada's 10 most wanted men was arrested Tuesday night in a house less than a quarter-mile from the Shawnigan Lake RCMP detachment office.

Randolph Bruce Byrle Johanson, 37, appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning and was charged with escape, possession of hashish, theft over $200 and possession of a restricted firearm.

He was remanded to Nov. 27 for election of trial method and plea.

Johanson had been at large since April 8, 1972, when he and two other men escaped from William Head prison.

Colwood RCMP Sgt. Gerry O'Neil said members of his detachment and Duncan's, acting on a tip from Nanaimo police, went to a residence behind Mason's store in Shawnigan Village early Tuesday evening.

After a four-hour surveillance officers entered the building and arrested a man whom they believed to be Johanson.

The man, who used a different name, offered no resistance. Police found an unloaded .22 revolver in his packsack.

O'Neil said the man told them he had worked in northern Vancouver Island logging camps for the past two years.

He was visiting a workmate at the time of his arrest.

NEW BLOOD in the form of freshman Victoria alderman Bob Ellis, attended here by clinic assistant Cynthia Zilkie, was first in line today at a donor clinic for 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Red Cross crews say stormy weather has cut intake of donations heavily this week. A clinic will be held Thursday in the Princess Charlotte room of The Empress from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Everybody is welcome. (John McKay photo)

$3,000 BAIL SET

Bail was set at $3,000 Tuesday for a 22-year-old man accused of three offences, including "confining" a Victoria man.

Douglas Stanley Halstead, of no fixed address, was charged in provincial court with confining George Salvadore, extorting $20 from the petty cash of Thomas Plimley Ltd., 1070 Yates, and stealing a 1973 Triumph from Thomas Plimley Ltd. The offences are alleged to have occurred Nov. 12.

Information supplied to the court at the bail hearing by prosecutor Gordon Macdonald and lawyer Gordon Detwiller was banned from publication or broadcast at Detwiller's request.

Halstead was remanded to Friday for election of trial method.

Talks Started Again On Disputed Property

Long-running negotiations between the city of Victoria and the Greater Victoria School Board, over a parcel of city-owned land on Cecelia Street, were resumed Tuesday after a lengthy delay — but with a new slant.

The eight lots in question are next to the school district's distribution centre, and the board has been trying to acquire the property for more than two years.

But last year city council attached strings to the deal. It insisted the school board should pay not only half the market price, but also settle a $60,000 outstanding bill for health services.

The board reacted angrily, with chairman Peter Bunn calling the proposition "blackmail," and claimed the $86,574 selling price laid down by the city was far higher than the price originally agreed under a "gentleman's agreement."

Trustees also disputed the city's contention that they were in debt for health services, saying the board would only pay for health services actually rendered and not a share of all health costs.

There the matter apparently rested, until Tuesday. But today a city source said the negotiations have "turned away from the aspect of compensation." In other words, the controversial health bill has been dropped.

Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the zoning and land-use planning committee, confirmed that the basis of talks now is land trading, and predicted the matter could be resolved within two weeks.

"We're looking basically at who owns what and who needs what," he said, but declined to give any further details on grounds that this would prejudice the negotiations.

However, city sources said Victoria may be suggesting some kind of land swap which would see the Cecelia Street property exchanged for school board property near South Park School which the city wants.

Recreational and community uses would be appropriate to that location opposite Beacon Hill Park, they said.

A Super Nifty Month So Far for Cougars

It's not over yet, but November has been super nifty for Victoria Cougars.

Tuesday 6-3 victory over Saskatoon Baldes in the Saskatchewan city continued to make it an all-winning month for Victoria's Western Canada Hockey League team.

Pat Ginnell's hot Cougars extended their victory streak to nine games, including eight this month, with the clear-cut decision over the Eastern Division's top team.

Returning to Victoria today for a six-game home stand, the Cougars will finish off their November schedule with two games against Calgary Centennials (Saturday and next Tuesday) and one against Lethbridge Broncos.

At the rate they have been going, and with home ice in their favor, November may be a perfect month for the Cats.

The hot run has enabled Victoria to build up a 10-point lead atop the Western Division. The Cougars got cushion-padding help Tuesday from New Westminster when the Bruins downed the second-place Tigers 4-1 in medicine Hat.

In other games, Kamloops Chiefs defeated Winnipeg Clubs 4-3 and Regina Pats free-wheeled to a 9-3 decision over Lethbridge.

The battle of the divisional leaders attracted 3,415 fans—a season's high — to the Saskatoon arena. The Cougars made believers of Saskatoon fans who, in three previous seasons, were accustomed to watching Blades have things their own way against Victoria teams.

Smart penalty-killing performances and Lloyd Saar's netminding—when both were needed—and a blanced attack highlighted the Cougar triumph.

Tied 1-1 after the opening period, Cougars' penalty-killers and Saar were especially effective in the second when Victoria raced into a 4-1 lead.

The Cougars did it without defenceman Tim Williams and with centre Mel Bridgman coming off a bout with the flu. Bridgman managed only two assists but it was enough to run his league-leading point total to 56.

Williams sat out the game after suffering an ankle injury in a Sunday game at Regina. Williams was hit on the ankle with a shot, but the injury is not believed serious.

All three lines figured in the scoring with Don Cairns connecting twice, Danny Lucas, Rick LaPointe, Eric Sanderson and Gord Roberts adding singles.

Winger Neil Hawryliw scored two goals for the Jack McLeod-coached Blades, both on power plays and Blair Chapman added the other.

It was Victoria's sixth straight road victory and boosted the team's over-all travelling record to 11 victories, two ties and three losses.

The defeat ended Saskatoon's five-game unbeaten run on a night that saw other streaks stop and continue.

Three power-play goals by New Westminster helped the Bruins tag Medicine Hat with its second home-ice defeat.

At Winnipeg, the surprising Chiefs made it four straight and ended the Clubs' four-game unbeaten string as Darryl Ferner contributed two goals.

At Regina, Al Dumba, Les Grauer, Greg Ing and Dave Faulkner each pumped in two goals as the defending champion Pats turned in their most productive game of the year.

Load-Sharing Style Works for Canucks

Times News Services

There's a big test of togetherness coming up for Vancouver Canucks, who continued their happy habit of sharing the load Tuesday night and stretched their first-place margin to nine points in the Smythe Division of the National Hockey League.

As they have done several times in high-scoring games this season, the Canucks divided the scoring burden as they whipped St. Louis Blues 6-3 at Pacific Coliseum to set a club record of seven straight undefeated contests on home ice.

Six different players connected for goals before another capacity crowd as the Canucks stormed from behind a 2-1 deficit with five successive tallies before Wayne Merrick fired the final St. Louis goal with only 16 seconds remaining.

It was the fifth straight triumph for coach Phil Maloney's surprising squad, which got first-period goals from Don Lever, Andre Boudrias and Bobby Lalonde, plus third period tallies form Gerry Meehan, John Gould and Gregg Boddy, who ended a frustrating drought with his first goal of the season.

Getting first-period shots behind Vancouver goalie Gary Smith were Larry Sacharuk and Bill Collins.

The nine-point bulge over the formerly-favored Chicago Black Hawks could be a welcome cushion for the Canucks during the next seven days, when their load-sharing efficiency will be severely tested during five games, against Philadelphia, New York Islanders, Boston, Kansas City and St. Louis.

In other games Tuesday night, the Islanders nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3, and Washington Capitals broke a 14-game winless streak as two players scored their first NHL goals in a 6-4 win over the hapless California Golden Seals.

Mike Marson, Philadelphia's second pick in last June's amateur draft, scored his first two goals of the season and Bruce Cowick, who ended his junior career with Victoria Cougars, notched his first NHL tally.

Autosport: A Couple Of Winners Team Up

It has been said there are no halfway people in autosport, and that goes for cars too. It's mostly all or nothing at all when you start reaching for the top.

Dick Midgley is a case in point for the owners, Hershel McGriff for the drivers.

Owner of a marine business in the city, Midgley has been in car racing for almost 20 years. Owner of a lumber firm in Bridal Veil, Ore., McGriff has been in and out of racing and back again over a longer period of time.

Midgley has won major events in every category in which he has raced a car — until now. He has moved through jalopies, stocks, modifieds, super-stocks, and now is in grand national. Grand national is the only one in which he hasn't been finally successful. But that may change soon.

McGriff, who has had two separate racing careers, has always been a winner too.

So a union seemed natural, was consummated and now they are together. And the fruits of that merger will be known this Sunday. Because that's when McGriff will drive Midgley's completely rebuilt Chevelle in Sunday's Los Angeles Times 500 at Ontario Motor Speedway.

The Midgley '72 car has been updated to '74 standards by McGriff's personal crew of mechanics, and this is how it all came about.

He Liked What He Saw

Midgley has been angling for a major NASCAR title the past few years and likely has spent a few "thousands" in the process. But all attempts have been for naught. Well not quite. Ross Surgenor did drive his '72 Chevelle to an 11th place finish in June at Riverside. In a previous race at Riverside he dropped out with mechanical trouble after 10 laps.

Two disappointments, or maybe the car just wasn't quite good enough? But that's racing.

Then this summer when McGriff, who knew the car, was here for the Canada 200, which he won, took a long look at Midgley's car with an eye to the future. He liked what he saw, invited his chief mechanic to return with him for a more thorough examination, said he thought the car could be improved to competitive standards, said he would like to drive it and, when nobody had reason to think otherwise, a deal with Midgley was struck.

McGriff would work the car over to his specifications in his shop and drive it under Midgley's colors at Ontario, Sunday, and at Riverside in the Winston Western 500 in January.

After that it would be Midgley's car to race as he sees fit and with Surgenor most likely back in the driver's seat.

If that is probably an over-simplification of what Midgley hopes will lead to success in the big time, it won't be that easy either. Because the Times 500 is a class plus event and will feature, among others, Richard Petty, NASCAR champion for the fifth time this year; Cale Yarborough, second to Petty; David Pearson, Bobby Allison, and a Canadian, Earl Ross who, with a good showing, could end up as rookie-of-the-year.

A Petty Then—in 1954

Of course, McGriff must first qualify, and that exercise will take place Friday and Saturday with 40 to start. As an added tuneup on Saturday, he'll race his own Ollie Express in the Permatex 200 in which he qualified sixth last weekend. This car, incidentally, was built in Victoria by Harvey Chipper and Dave Smith. Chipper is otherwise known as crew chief for Gary Kershaw, Western Speedway super-stock champion and winner at Riverside in 1971. So Victoria has an interest there as well.

To the red necks, McGriff is well known. His record is legend. To those outside the pits, McGriff has won 22 races in the Northwest this year and has 13 victories in 25 NASCAR Sportsman Class events. This is very good and consistent with his five-year average and better than most.

The other half of the McGriff story is that 20 years ago he was in the same position — top ranked. He was racing against Petty's father, Lee Petty. It was head-to-head and in the final six NASCAR races in 1954, Petty won three, McGriff three and each time the other came second.

Then McGriff retired. He returned home to a struggling lumber business, fathered five children, looked at the books one day, found sales were good, and promptly "unretired". Now, at times, two of his sons race against him.

He doesn't look 46, doesn't talk 46, but then who in autosport does? Most of the time they keep it airy and quick and live by the unwritten philosophy "if you have to ask, you'll never know."

In McGriff's case, that doesn't include going halfway. Anytime. The same has been true for Midgley. They should make a fine couple.

Purple People Plague Goalie

By The Canadian Press

Goalie Jim Shaw of Toronto Toros says the only thing he remembers seeing during Tuesday night's World Hockey Association game with Cleveland was the Crusaders' purple jerseys.

"They said before we got here that Cleveland had trouble scoring, but those purple jerseys were right before me all night," said Shaw, after stopping 41 shots on goal and leading the Toros to a 6-5 win.

The Toros held a 6-3 lead going into the last five minutes of the game on two goals by Pat Hickey and one each by Tom Simpson, Frank Mahovlich, Steve Cuddie and Paul Henderson.

The Crusaders managed a 2-0 edge early in the game on goals by Al McDonough and Grant Erickson. McDonough scored another in the second period, and then at 15:42 of the third frame, Terry Holbrook made it 6-4. Two minutes later, Russ Walker narrowed the margin to 6-5.

Only 6,227 spectators watched the game, the second played in Cleveland's new Coliseum. The game originally was the Crusaders' home opener, scheduled for Oct. 27, but had to be postponed when the icemaking equipment failed.

The win increased Toronto's lead to six points over second-place Quebec Nordiques in the WHA's Canadian Division.

In Tuesday's other WHA games, Houston Aeros trounced Indianapolis Racers 10-0, San Diego Mariners edged Vancouver Blazers 3-2 and New England Whalers shaded Chicago Cougars 5-4.

Mark Howe scored three times for Houston in a 7½-minute stretch during a six-goal second period by the Aeros.

Mark's brother Marty also had a goal and an assist and their father Gordie had a pair of goals. Andre Hinse also had a pair of goals for Houston.

Ron Grahame picked up the shutout as the Aeros maintained their two-point lead over the Mariners in the West Division.

The Mariners got an edge in the faceoff circle and two goals in a three-minute stretch in the second period from Gene Peacosh to edge the Blazers before 3,861 San Diego fans. San Diego won 69 of 100 faceoffs.

Ballard Charges Leafs 'Too Damned Serene'

TORONTO (CP) — President Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs said Tuesday his players should be ashamed to walk the streets and face the citizens of Toronto because of the way they have been playing.

In an interview, Ballard accused the players on the National Hockey League team of being fat, lazy and unmotivated and coach Red Kelly of being too easy on them.

Ballard said the team has been hurt badly by a lack of leadership and that team captain Dave Keon is not giving the leadership a captain should provide.

Keon has a no-cut contract and Ballard said the club has seen the last of this type of contract.

"Things are too damned serene around here," said Ballard. "That's the trouble. I think we're too fat."

HAROLD BALLARD
. . . leadership lacking

The Leafs were expected to be the league's most improved team this year, but have won only five of their first 16 games and have the fourth-worst record in the 18-team league.

Ballard said he finds it difficult taking "money from the people of Toronto . . . when the team is putting on a show like that."

The 70-year-old club president said the club isn't throwing its weight around and used Inge Hammarstrom as an example.

"You could send Hammarstrom into the corner with six eggs in his pocket and he wouldn't break any of them," he said.

Ballard said Kelly, who came to Toronto from Pittsburgh Penguins at the start of last season, has been "too nice a guy."

Jauch Says He's Not Leaving

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Ray Jauch, preparing Edmonton Eskimos for Sunday's Grey Cup game in Vancouver against Montreal Alouettes, has denied rumors that he plans to leave the club.

"I am not going any place," said Jauch, who guided the Eskimos to their second straight Western Football Conference crown this season.

"I have not been contacted by anybody, directly or indirectly. There is no basis to the rumors at all.

"I have one more year to run on my contract and I will never default on my obligations unless some very unusual situations would come up."

Jauch is in his sixth season as head coach and has turned the Eskimos into consistent contenders.

One of the rumors had Jauch moving to Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League to replace Bud Grant who would become general manager.

Another had Jauch moving to Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Jauch said he would be concerned if the rumors got in his way of Grey Cup preparations.

"I'm concerned about anything that could affect the football players, I don't want their attention on anything but the Grey Cup game.

"My objective is to get Edmonton a Grey Cup. And that doesn't necessarily mean that if we get one, that I wouldn't be interested in winning three times in a row."

Practice plans have not been settled.

Pigpen Patrol A Key Factor

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Alouettes' front four has been called the Pigpen Patrol, the Larkettes and the Banana Splits at one time or another.

The defensive line is one of the most physical in the Canadian Football League and will be a key factor when Montreal meets Edmonton Eskimos in the Grey Cup final Sunday in Vancouver. The Alouettes work out in the West Coast city today.

CFL statistics show that the unit — Junior Ah You, Glen Weir, Gord Judges and Joe Critchlow — is one of the most proficient against the run. The Alouettes allowed less than four yards per rush this year and also led in pass defence.

Ah You is six feet three inches tall and weighs 230 pounds, Weir is 6-2 and 245 pounds and Critchlow six feet and 230 pounds.

"I'd have to agree, there's nothing awesome about us, except Junior," said Judges, who is 6-3 and 250 pounds.

"Then, of course, looks are deceiving sometimes.

"Junior is the most extraordinary athlete on the team. He could play any position he wanted to. He's so fast and agile. He's like a gazelle.

"I've never seen a guy as lossey-goosey as Glen. You know what he was doing before the game Sunday? He was chewing a piece of plastic and taping a chair in the dressing room.

"As fast as Junior is, Glen is actually quicker getting off the ball. He's sort of a master at football ju-jitsu the way he uses the other player's momentum to get the ball.

"And he doesn't know what pain is."

LONDON BIDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Preliminary discussions were to begin here today about the possibility of a Canadian Football League franchise for London, Ont.

Jake Gaudaur, league commissioner, said Tuesday night that "a person from London has requested the opportunity to talk about a franchise," but added "it would be premature to say that something is imminent."

Gaudaur declined to identify the man or who he represents, but said the man is "known to me through past experiences in Canadian football—he is more interested in the sport than in making a fast buck." Gaudaur said he hoped the person would be willing to be identified after the meeting.

He added that "the whole question is academic until there is a stadium there."

NFL Denies Move to Trim Rosters to 36

Ed Garvey, head of the players' union, is inaccurately quoting the league as having declared an intention to trim rosters of National Football League teams to 36 players next year, an NFL official insisted today.

Terry Bledsoe said in New York that Garvey had met Tuesday with New York Jets at their training camp and said he had received a letter in which NFL management council chief John Tompson claimed the league would cut rosters to 36 from 47 players in 1975.

Bledsoe said that was not the case, adding that no roster limit has yet been set for the 1975 season.

He said that on Oct. 17 Thompson wrote Garvey to explain that because of this year's players' strike, NFL rosters would be increased to 47 from 40 players for the 1974 season only.

Since 1964, active NFL rosters have allowed for 40 players, with another seven eligible to be carried on the taxi squad. This year, the NFL eliminated the taxi squad and upped the active roster to 47.

Bledsoe said the Oct. 17 letter from Thompson also said the switch to 47-man rosters was not to be considered a change in the NFL's constitution, which calls for 36 players, or less, per team.

He said NFL rosters carried 36 players until 1964. Every year since then, until 1974, team owners passed a resolution prior to the season amending the 36-player limit to 40 players, Bledsoe said.

Too Much Early Snow Could Plague Ski Area

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Snow could become a problem at the ski area now being developed on Mt. Arrowsmith, between Parksville and Port Alberni . . . About six inches of new snow now surrounds the new two-storey day lodge . . . Luckily the roof is on and the wiring and heating is expected to be put in later this week . . . However, they are still waiting for the twin-rotor helicopter to install the remaining chair lift towers . . . And then, they still have to string the lift cable . . . On the plus side, the slopes and trails have been sufficiently cleared for operation this season, MacMillan Bloedel has finished a bypass road which eliminates a steep grade going up to the area and the provincial highways department has announced it will provide for snow removal.

It appears the powers-to-be have finally come up with the only logical solution to the deer nuisance problem on Saanich Peninsula . . . Saanich will be open to deer hunting by bow and arrow only — any age, any sex and no limit — from Dec. 9, 1974 to March 2, 1975 . . . Permits will be issued to a limited number of bowhunters and tags must still be purchased for every animal bagged . . . Doubtless, some well-meaning people will object to this solution . . . It appears unlikely that a sport fishing regulation banning the use of treble hooks in all B.C. rivers and streams containing salmon or steelhead will be instituted on the target date of Jan. 1, 1976 . . . But look to the future, such a change will eventually come as a conservation measure and to stop the practice of jigging fish . . . I, for one, support such a move.

Mt. Doug Rams try out new 'see-through' backboard

Behind the Backboard? You Can Still See It All

SCHOLASTIC SCENE

By Jim Crerar

The public gets a first chance to see the $232,000 gymnasium expansion at Mt. Douglas Senior Secondary during an open house tomorrow night at 8. The most noticeable feature, of course, will be the size.

The addition doubles the dimensions of the old gym to approximately 88 by 146 feet. That in itself has the physical education people at at Mount Doug in a state of ecstasy, not to mention 1,146 students.

But there are two other features — one at each end of the gym — the significance of which is likely to escape the average visitor tomorrow night.

These are the basketball backboards. They're made of transparent fibreglass and according to Dale Bate, boys' basketball coach and co-chairman of Mt. Doug's physical education program, they're the first of their kind in any Greater Victoria high school.

Glass boards have been a long time coming to city high schools. They've been around for years in other centres and at the university level, but the tendency at the secondary school level understandably has been to stay with the more economical wood boards.

It would be incorrect, however, to assume that Mt. Doug has gone overboard in adding expensive frills to the expanded gym. For example, spectators will continue to use the old bleachers that accommodate about 350. In time, seating will be addded to bring capacity to as much as 700.

And while the increased floor space can accommodate two physical education classes, a folding divider is another item that must wait.

Even so, the extra space has solved a lot of scheduling problems for Bate, co-chairman Stan Gill and physical education teachers Nel Bing, Jill Quiney and John Howe. In the old gym, one class could use the floor, a second the stage and a third was outside when weather permitted. Now two classes can use the floor and that third class can use the stage on bad days.

School teams in at least eight sports also benefit, including boys' and girls' basketball and volleyball, cross-country, indoor soccer, rugby, wrestling, badminton and field hockey, all of which have indoor training sessions.

"Gymnasium expansion is definitely a step we've needed for a long while," Bate said. "It makes a big difference having a facility that can accommodate all the students, not just in athletics but for social activities like dances and so on. It makes it possible to organize and run a cohesive program."

There will be a variety of activities tomorrow night marking the open house, all of them involving teachers and students. Included will be a pair of 20-minute basketball games in which Mt. Doug boys' and girls' teams will play the grads.

You can see it all — through the backboards if you want.

Slugger Burroughs Tops Baseball Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Slugging outfielder Jeff Burroughs of Texas Rangers was named the most valuable player in baseball's American League.

Burroughs, 23, was playing only his second year in the major leagues in 1974. He won handily over Oakland outfielder Joe Rudi to become the first player from an expansion club to win the award.

The muscular outfielder, who drove in a league-leading 118 runs, hit 25 homers and batted .301, was the only player named on all 24 ballots by the Baseball Writers Association of America (BBWA).

The writers, two from each AL city, gave Burroughs 10 first-place votes and a total of 248 points. Rudi had 5½ votes for first and 161½ points overall.

Two of Rudi's team-mates at Oakland followed in the voting. Third baseman Sal Bando had 143½ points for third place and outfielder Reggie Jackson 119 for fourth.

In fifth place was Texas pitcher Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., with 118 points. Jenkins won 25 games for Texas after having an off-season with Chicago Cubs of the National League in 1973.

He lost out in voting for the 1974 Cy Young Award as the league's top pitcher to Jim (Catfish) Hunter of the A's, who was sixth in the MVP voting with 107 points, giving the top two teams in the AL West a sweep of the top six positions.

A total of 34 players were nominated by the BBWA. Points were tabulated for 10 places on a basis of 14 for first, then 9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 for the remainder.

The presence of so many outstanding ballplayers with the World Champion A's apparently prevented any of them from winning. Of the 24 first-place votes, Oakland players collected 11. But with Jenkins claiming three votes for first, Texas players had 13.

Only three players from the AL East finished in the top 10. Elliott Maddox of the second-place New York Yankees was eighth with 59 points while infielder Bobby Grich of Baltimore Orioles had 49 for ninth place and Oriole left-hander Mike Cuellar had 42 for 10th.

Burroughs signed for a reported $88,000 with Washington Senators after being selected the No. 1 draft choice in June 1969.

Team-Mate Lets U.S. Rider Win

TORONTO (CP) — Dennis Murphy of the United States stepped aside Tuesday night to enable a teammate and his team to take the lead in the Royal Horse Show.

When Murphy, on Tuscaloosa, and Rodney Jenkins, riding Idle Dice, tied for first place in the International Hit and Hurry Stakes, Murphy declined to ride in the jump-off.

Jenkins and Murphy each finished with perfect rounds of 26 points and times of 58.2 seconds. Normally, the faults or points decide the winner, with the time being decisive only when there is a tie in points.

The automatic win enabled Jenkins to move past France's Hubert Parot into top spot in the individual point standings.

The 1-2 finish by Jenkins and Murphy moved the U.S. past France into top spot in the point standings.

Jenkins has 22 points and Parot 21. Third is Hendrik Snoek of Germany with 15 points.

The U.S. team has 55 points to 44 for France, 42 for England and 21 for the Canadian team of Jim Elder, Ian Millar, Moffat Dunlap and John Simpson.

Elder was eighth and Millar 20th in Tuesday's competition.

Volley of Goals Buries Bairds

Saanich Braves scored four goals in 57 seconds — including three in 29 seconds — en route to an 8-2 decision over Lake Cowichan Bairds in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Tuesday at Pearkes Arena.

In the only other game, Juan de Fuca Gulls and Victoria Nixons fought to a 4-4 deadlock at Memorial Arena.

Braves led 2-0 at the start of the third period but quickly boosted their margin to 6-0 with a goal at 3:46 and three bunched between 4:14 and 4:43.

Perry Corrigan, Rob Coldwell and Tom Davies each scored twice for Saanich while single tallies were recorded by Kim Bowles and Rick Turcotte. Mark Coloumbe and Don Peterson replied for Bairds.

John McKerrow managed to make 38 saves in the Lake Cowichan net while, at the other end of the ice, Mike Pierard blocked 21 shots.

Five majors and five misconducts were handed out in the fight-marred contest.

At Memorial Arena, Dave Archibald scored his third goal of the night at 18:45 of the third period to salvage the tie for Gulls. Dan Waluska was the other Juan de Fuca marksman while Tom Dohan, Rob Price, Mike Paget and Steve Leatham counted for Nixons.

Mike Coburn never lacked for action in the Gulls' net, making 46 saves.

Sues Win Despite Handicap

Imposition of a heavy handicap didn't stop Sue Gower and Sue Metcalfe from scoring a victory in Saanich Open badminton championship play Tuesday.

Saddled with a minus 12 handicap, the Sues from University of Victoria defeated Esquimalt's Joyce Tuey and Leslie Mitchell 15-14, 15-12 in women's doubles.

Youthful Jim McMillan and Pat Kelly from the host Brentwood Club defeated Fay Baxter and Colin Evans of Esquimalt 15-14, 15-12 in handicap mixed doubles.

Play in the event being staged at Brentwood Community Hall continues tonight.

Tonight's draw:

7 p.m.—LizAnne Ogden vs. Allison Smith; Diane Slugget vs. Carol Jones; Lyn Polson vs., Emily Young.

7:30—Carl Molholm and Ken Cartwright vs. Ron Sluggett and Martin and Marty Horne vs. winner; Hallie Dangerfield vs. winner.

8—Lesley Mitchell vs. winner; Sue Morrison vs. winner.

8:30—Rob Guenther vs. Tony Woods; Sue Gower and Sue Metcalfe vs. Joan Parrby and Ann Barr; Muriel Knott and Jill McMillan vs. Diane Molholm and Sue Morrison.

Touch Clinic Set Thursday

The National Touch Association will hold a clinic Thursday afternoon at Macdonald Park to let people in on the secrets of touch football.

The clinic will feature instruction and a game between last year's senior champion, Moosehead Tavern of Burlington, and the Eastern All-Stars in an attempt to spark interest in the sport.

Touch football is played with seven men per side with neither punting nor blocking. The lines of scrimmage are five yards apart and all players are eligible receivers.

The clinic is scheduled to start at 3.

Do you rent an apartment or a house?

If so, you are probably eligible for a $30 or $80 Renter's Grant.

The Renter's Resource Grant is a form of tax relief, similar to the Homeowner's Grant, to renters in British Columbia.

Tenants under 65 years of age receive $30. Those 65 and over receive $80.

It is available through recent revenue increases from the province's natural resources.

Who is eligible?

If you have occupied rented accommodations in British Columbia for one year, you are probably eligible.

Only one grant a year is allowed per rental unit.

Please ensure your application is submitted prior to Dec. 31, 1974.

Pick up your application form today from any provincial government agency office or mail this coupon.

Bucks Break Longest Slump

By The Associated Press

Jime Price scored 43 points Tuesday night to bring Milwaukee Bucks, who have been foundering without Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, out of their doldrums.

Price's points, a career high, helped the Bucks snap an 11-game losing streak with a 122-108 win over Phoenix Suns in a National Basketball Association game. The slump was the longest in Milwaukee's seven-year history.

Abdul-Jabbar, who broke a hand and hurt an eye during an exhibition game against Buffalo Braves Oct. 5, is expected to rejoin the Bucks Thursday night for part-time duty against Kansas City-Omaha.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Buffalo Braves won 111-106 victory over Golden State Warriors, Houston Rockets downed Cleveland Cavaliers 94-85, New York Knicks edged Washington Bullets 86-85, Atlanta Hawks trimmed Seattle SuperSonics 122-113, Kansas City-Omaha Kings downed Detroit Pistons 97-87, and Portland Trail Blazers outlasted Chicago Bulls 98-92 in overtime.

In the only American Basketball Association game, Utah topped St. Louis 99-93.

Bob McAdoo's 43 points paced Buffalo as the Braves extended their winning streak to eight, a team record.

Houston moved within one game of first-place Washington in the Central Division by defeating Cleveland with the help of Mike Newlin's 24 points.

New York nipped the Bullets on Walt Frazier's layup with one second remaining. Frazier finished with 17 points and a career-high 16 rebounds.

BRAVES BEAT NANAIMO HUBSTERS

NANAIMO — Belmont Braves tripped Nanaimo Hubsters 71-66 here Thursday night in an exhibition high school boys' basketball game.

Bruce Robertson led Braves with 17 points while clubmate Bruce English added 14 points. Mike Berris was the top Nanaimo marksman with 16 points.

Braves are in the "A" division of the Greater Victoria league which opens its regular schedule Jan. 3.

WFL $20 Million in Debt, Going Deeper

Times News Service

If the World Football League is to survive anther season and avoid the irredible problems of its iitial venture, it must find nw financing for many o its teams. And it must fid it fairly quickly.

An Associated Press srvey shows that many of the still surviving franchises in the shaky first-year league are in poor economic condition. Failure to find new dollars and stability will be terminal to some franchises, and inturn, could eventually kill the league.

These problems will be the main order of business this weekend in Memphis when league officials and prospective investors meet. An example of the league's problems is that only two of the original owners are still active, and officials acknowledge there must be more stability than that.

The AP survey shows a first-year loss of about $20 million for the league. The figure could go millions higher.

The strongest franchise is believed to be Memphis, owned by John F. Bassett of Toronto. There have been no reported problems in meeting the player payroll and the club should get more fan support next year when it picks up Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, Paul Warfield and D. D. Lewis, currently stars in the National Football League. The club estimates it has lost $700,000 this year, and that may be lowest in the league.

Elsewhere, the picture is much bleaker. For instance:

● Birmingham Americans, who have lost between $300,000 and $1 million depending upon which estimate is used, were pitched out of their offices last week for nonpayment of bills and are behind in paying their players. Owner Bill Putnam said it had seen his intention to raise $1.5 million in local money to support the team and he had only raised $175,000.

The Americans are currently unable to play any playoff games at home because of court action brought to collect $100,000 the team owes in taxes. Putnam plans a public stock offering.

To compound Putnam's problems, the Internal Revenue Service came around Tuesday to file a tax lien of about $237,000 against his football team.

● Portland Storm, who have not paid their players in seven weeks, are the subject of a league hunt for local owners. The team is owned by a Canadian, Bob Harris of London, and officials say it cannot stay in Portland without local support in the form of dollars. It is estimated the team is $1 million in the red.

Bob Hazen, a Portland banker heading a campaign to keep Storm in the Oregon city, said Tuesday local ownership is still at least $400,000 away from its goal of $1 million. Two of four investors, sounded out earlier, are still "interested" in putting up $200,000 each. Two aren't.

● New York, a city to which the WFL hopes to return in 1976, still has a franchise of sorts, although the team now is playing in Charlotte. Officials have told creditors they have assets of $94,750 and liabilities of $2.5 million

● In Charlotte general manager Upton Bell has been unsuccessful in finding local investors to partially purchase the club from the New York owners. And the team has continued to lose money in the North Carolina city, failing to pay its players the last few weeks.

● Players on Florida Blazers have not been paid for 11 weeks and the club is deep in debt. Officials said Tuesday they hoped to com- Thursday. Similar hopes in plete sale of the team by the past months have failed to yield buyers for the team.

● Larry G. Hatfield, president of Southern California Sun, has pleaded not guilty to a federal grand jury's charge that he submitted a false financial statement to gain a $365,000 loan for the team, which has lost about $1 million this year. At one point, this team was also behind in paying players.

● The Hawaiians, considered one of the more stable franchises, have lost about $3 million this season, and owner Chris Hemmeter vows not to go through another year like this one. There have been reports the club might move to Chicago.

● In Chicago, the Fire quit for the season last week. Owner Tom Origer, propped up by a $150,000 loan from three other owners at midseason, says he has lost $800,000 and he is seeking to sell the franchise to another city.

● An effort to sell the Shreveport franchise, which landed there after being moved from Houston, to local businessmen has not yet met with success. Officials of the team, which has lost about $1.5 million, admitted last weekthat they had withheld information about inflated attendance figures because of a pending stock sale.

● Efforts to sell the Jacksonville franchise, which was dropped from the league at midseason, have continued since with no success.

Blazers Moving?

TORONTO (CP)—The franchise of Vancouver Bazers of the World Hockey Association is likely to be shifed to Calgary next year, columnist Dick Beddoes says in tday's Globe and Mail.

Beddoes quotes an unnamed WHA club official as saying "there'll be some drastic changes in the WHA at soon as next year."

The official also said there has been some discusson of the Canadian teams breaking away from the WHA and setting up their own all-Caradian league, with the hope that the three Canadian teams in the NHL would eventually join them.

Beddoes reports the official said the Vancouver team will be shifted to Calgary if owner Jim Pattison "can find somebody to unload the Blazers on in Calgary."

The official says that the five teams in the Canadian Division of the league are much healthier financially than the nine United States entries.

"What could happen, some of us hope, is that there'll be enough nationalism in Canada to eventually force an all-Canadian league," Beddoes quotes the official as saying.

"Wouldn't it be a hell of a thing to have teams like the Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs rolling into Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton?

"Some think Calgary, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Quebec, Canadiens, (Vancouver) Canucks and maybe two Toronto teams (the NHL Leafs and WHA Toros) would be a great setup. We could interlock some games with the Americans and naturally participate for the Stanley Cup," Beddoes reports the official told him.

Bank Among Toronto Baseball Bidders

TORONTO (UPI) — One of Canada's largest banks, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, emerged Tuesday as a member of a group of influential backers seeking to bring a major-league baseball franchise to Toronto.

The group, known as the Canadian Baseball Co., plans to file a formal application for a franchise with the National and American leagues this week.

Representatives then will push their case during the winter baseball meetings in New Orleans early next month.

Formation of the group was announced Tuesday as work began on a $15 million expansion plan for a stadium at the Canadian National Exhibition — the city's main sports complex.

When work is finished, the stadium will hold 46,000 spectators for baseball and nearly 60,000 for football. The present capacity is 35,000 for Canadian Football League games.

The entry of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce into negotiations appears to assure the group of plenty of big-money influence to bolster its position.

However, at last three other groups are believed seeking a Toronto franchise. They reportedly include Montreal industrialist R. Howard Webster, represented by Gerry Snyder, who made the successful pitch that put the Montreal Expos in the National League in the late 1960s.

The group hopes fans in Toronto will be able to see a major-league team in action by the spring of 1976.

A leading member of the Toronto group, businessman Sydney Cooper, said Tuesday that sufficient money would be available to gain a franchise if one is available at an expected price of $10 million to $12 million.

He said he hops a National League franchise comes to Toronto to spur "traditional rivalry" with Montreal.

"There is a reasonable chance of getting a franchise," he said. "We hope the owners vote for expansion when they meet in New Orleans. It is on their agenda."

"We would also be prepared to react quickly if a transfer franchise opportunity presents itself," Coper said.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Lorraine Koffski found good touch to roll an 899 triple and capture Bowler-of-the-Week honors in the seventh week of the Times 12th annual competition. Bowling at Duncan Lanes, Lorraine combined games of 266 and 268 with her high of 365 to score the victory in ladies' fivepin division. Lorraine qualifies for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Victorians Place In Can-Am Meet

Two Victorians captured runner-up honors in the Can-Am Taekwon-Do championship at Calgary on the weekend.

Terrance Crabbe was second in the Black Belt heavyweight division and Janet Ruest was second in the pee-wee division. Both are from Kwon's Taekwon-Do School of Victoria.

The championship attracted 200 competitors and 5,000 spectators.

Members of riding clubs on Vancouver Island are fortunate in having almost unlimited miles of trails.

In the Victoria area some clubs have co-operated with parks boards in keeping trails open. The Garden City Horsemen's Club at one time had an arrangement to work on the trails in both Mt. Douglas and Beaver Lake parks.

Other clubs would be well advised to follow such a lead and offer to open-up trails where legally possible. Municipal councils no doubt believe that "they help most who help themselves."

This year's list of horses which will not be allowed to race in the future contains the names of approximately 200 horses. Some are thoroughbreds that will be 11 years old in January, reaching mandatory retirement age. Others for one reason or another are unsound for racing and the majority are four or five years of age who do not have enough racing ability.

It is the latter group that provides many show horses for jumper, hack and hunter sections.

A few years ago, these horses cost a few hundred dollars — supply exceeding the demand. At this time "race-track rejects" are sold at the track for prices in the four figures and after some success in the show ring become worth fabulous amounts. Buyers from the U.S. frequently visit the Victoria area and purchase prospects.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Madson hosted a horse show at their Oak Meadows Stable on Prospect Lake Road Sunday this week.

Inside their large covered riding arena, the heavy downpour of rain all day had little effect on the number of competitors or the keen competition.

Lisa Stevenson won the hunter hack class, the green working hunter, handy working hunter and the open jumping. These wins move Lisa to the top in the close competition for the high aggregate award.

Karen Olson, riding Mrs. D. B. Carley's, Radio Hill, was what judge Mrs. Inez Fischer-Credo-Propfee was looking for in the open show hack, open conformation hunter and open working hunter, taking the top ribbon in these classes and the reserve in the high aggregate.

Debbie Essenden had two wins in the road hack class and Arab English pleasure; Libby Anderson, the green English pleasure, with Aileen Baldwin first in the owner-riding working hunter. D. B. Carley's Aesops Fable piloted by Julie Anderson won the three foot jumper class and was in the finals of the open jumping with fences over four feet.

Vancouver Island members of the B.C. Thoroughbred Breeders' Society held a dance Saturday with more than 300 people at Sanscha Hall, Sidney. This was the first of what is hoped will be an annual awards night at which recognition will be made of successful Island thoroughbreds.

Well-known "Voice of the Races" Jack Short was MC and was the recipient of a golden microphone as recognition of his contribution to racing over the years.

Dr. H. Talbot, veterinarian, of Kamloops received an engraved trophy in appreciation of his work, not only as a vet but as a breeder and owner of a racing stable over many years.

Ex-jockey, now a successful trainer, George Miller and "Scotty" Hughes, who has worked for many years as a member of the race track staff, were also presented with suitable awards.

Mrs. Alice Walker of Nanaimo received the only award offered this year to the owner of a successful thoroughbred, the trophy being won by Mrs. Walker' smare Matzia, dam of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Druce's stakes-winning Shadow's Dividend, Magic Shadow and Matabhai — the last-named two having won many races.

Mrs. Joan Druce, chairman of the Island group, was somewhat overwhelmed when presented with a token of appreciation by the Island members of the BCTB Society for the work she has done over the years in promoting thesociety and organizing the Island group.

Airmen Protest MoT Plan

Fifty Victoria pilots and aircraft owners have signed a petition protesting the Ministry of Transport's recent suggestion that private airstrips be subject to municipal regulations.

Those who signed were among 60 members of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association (COPA) attending a dinner meeting at the Imperial Inn.

"Members are strongly opposed to any dilution of the authority of the MoT over aeronautical matters in Canada," stated the petition.

"Municipalities could put in all sorts of nuisance bylaws whereas right now the laws are the same across the country," said COPA's B.C. director, Betty Wadsworth of Victoria.

Safety would be jeopardized if pilots could not count on standardized landing regulations and airport facilities across Canada, she said.

Bylaws might also impose more fees on flyers, she said.

"The attitude (of the MoT) is to soak the rich," she said, "but flyers are just ordinary people."

Canadian Aircraft Products president Don Cameron attended the meeting and said "aviation was born, grew and has thrived through its earliest and most critical periods with a minimum of control.

"It is now being subjected to a maximum of control."

Returns that pilots and aircraft owners must make to government agencies are increasing every year. "This leads to a breakdown of the system," he said.

"The evolved aviation system has opened up our countries, serviced them, developed them and given us the fine transportation that we have both nationally and internationally."

Cameron cited proposed municipal control over airport facilities as another step toward putting the private flyer "in imminent danger" of being driven out of the skies.

Cameron also struck out at environmentalists and other citizen groups which he called "the lunatic fringe" of society out to regulate aviation out of existence.

"Cloaked in a mantle of motherhood called public participation," he said, "pressure groups are forcing the government to place unnecessary restrictions on aviators."

Tourist Alert 27% Success

REGINA (CP) — Tourist Alert, a program introduced by the RCMP last summer to contact vacationers on family matters, experienced a 27-percent success rate this year, which RCMP officials said was a considerable improvement over similar programs during past years.

The police force daily compiled lists of persons believed travelling in Saskatchewan whom people were was trying to contact about urgent matters. The daily list was given to several newspapers, radio and television stations for publication.

Between June 1 and Sept. 30, there were 258 requests received to locate persons travelling in the province, and 70 were located.

J. E. Gibbon, commanding officer of RCMP F division, Regina, said requests to have vacationers located through Tourist Alert were accepted by local RCMP detachments; and requests from outside the country were funnelled through the police force's Ottawa office.

Long Time Between Trains

EDMONTON (CP) — The first train in more than two years moved over the Alberta Resources Railway (ARR) line this week following the completion of costly repairs to flooded sections of the track.

Restoration of service on the crown-owned railway represented the end of one headache for the provincial government, but the resumption of another — how to operate it in the black.

The ARR, which runs from Brule, 180 miles west of Edmonton, in a northerly direction to Grande Cache and Grande Prairie, is operated by Canadian National Railways under a contract with the province.

Built to connect the Grande Cache coal fields with the CNR main line and open up resource development in northwestern Alberta, it was a money-losing operation from the start.

When former premier Ernest Manning announced plans to build the 234-mile line in 1965, its projected cost was $40 million. By the time trains began rolling over it in 1969, the cost had more than doubled to $97 million.

New Home Guarantees Planned

EDMONTON (CP) — A warranty plan for buyers of new homes will probably be in effect by mid-1975, says Consumer Affairs Minister Bob Dowling.

The plan, worked out by the consumer affairs department and the Housing and Urban Development Association of Alberta, which represents 85 per cent of the province's housebuilders, gives a one-year warranty against major defects in a new house.

It also provides for a low-cost insurance scheme through which buyers of new homes can purchase four more years of warranty protection.

Dowling said the provincial government originally intended to introduce legislation on home warranties.

However, the HUDAC plan "is better than anything the government could run."

Immigrant Import Protested

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Federation of Labor has protested a Prince Albert company's plans to bring in 50 Spanish immigrants to work in northern Saskatchewan.

The federation's executive secretary, Larry Brown, said that there are more than 10,000 unemployed persons in Saskatchewan and the importation of workers will benefit no one but the company involved, Woodlands Enterprises Ltd.

Brown said it is also rumored that a Saskatoon garment factory is planning to import Philippine workers.

Woodlands has said it cannot get sufficient staff for its woodcutting operations and even with the 50 immigrants will have openings for anyone who wishes to work.

HOSPITAL STAFF BACK

EDMONTON (CP) — A cease-and-desist order was issued by the provincial Board of Industrial Relations Tuesday afternoon ordering service employees of Norwood Auxiliary Hospital and the Dr. Angus McGugan nursing home back to work.

About 300 employees walked off their jobs Tuesday morning in protest after a cost-of-living bonus of $10 was offered by the hospital district's board of directors to all non-union employees.

The employees, members of Local 1158 of the Canadian union of Public Employees, returned to work in time for the 11 p.m. shift Tuesday night.

A spokesman for CUPE said countercharges will be filed today, claiming discrimination against union members under the unfair practices section of the Alberta Labor Act.

He said attempts to negotiate an interim agreement Tuesday did not succeed because hospital administrators refused to include union employees in their offer, and quoted a hospital board member as saying Grandview Auxiliary Hospital might have to be closed because insufficient employees can be kept.

CUPE said it believes the $100 was given to entice employees of other hospitals to seek jobs at Grandview. A spokesman said the wildcat strike of the employees Tuesday will have a beneficial effect for the union in current negotiations.

Hospital district administrator David McBean said the union members could not be considered for the $100 increase because negotiations are in progress.

Sculpture Bound to Dance

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Watching the Anna Wyman dancers at work, the thought occurs that if she had not been a dancer-choreographer she might have been a sculptor.

Sculptural abstracts and concepts with regard to space manipulation were constantly before us Tuesday on the McPherson Playhouse stage where the Wyman troupe was giving a one-night performance.

The program consisted of five pieces, all choreographed by Wyman and danced by the troupe of eight — five women and three men — to electronic music and, here and there, some live sound from the dancers.

There is little fault to be found with the discipline or the gymnastic excellence and fluency of these dancers. In fact while the total concept is altogether contemporary one is strongly reminded that technique is still basic to this art.

The discipline is so finely honed, indeed, that one is all the more conscious of the tiniest slip in timing — of which there were a few.

Wyman's Dance Theatre has little to do with characterization and is interpretive only in the sense that the dancers respond to and visualize the pulse and mood of the taped sound.

Its focus is purely on movement, on the sculpture of mass within space, on shapes and the patterns created by shapes in a constant kaleidoscopic shift.

To achieve this costumes are kept minimal. A body-stocking type of leotard in various colors for the different numbers is the basic apparel, embellished only now and then with spinning top-shaped caftans or a bit of floating drapery.

More vital to the Wyman concept is light, and this is handled with maximum effectiveness, the lighting design of Nicholas Chernovich having the ideal sculptural quality to heighten the choreography.

Some of the program seen Tuesday was performed here on the troupe's last visit. Here at the Eye of the Hurricane, a beautifully designed piece, and the humorous Dance Is . . . which reveals Wyman's creativity at its sparkling best.

A succession of bicycles of antique design are ridden about the stage in silhouette. We become conscious of the shape of wheels and their revolution and presently human bodies are repeating and developing the same shapes and movements.

Next we see the various rhythms and patterns created by athletes at work and play and finally a lampoon of many types of curtain calls.

The principal fault to be found with the Wyman troupe is monotony. Possibly it would be wise for Wyman to introduce another choreographer into her theatre, one whose ideas, while true to the basic concept, would strike a fresh note.

At the close of the performance, Tuesday, one could not escape the feeling that two out of the five works had said all that Wyman had to say.

The rest was repetition.

VILAS WINS TITLE

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) - Guillermo Vilas of Argentina captured the $100,000 Commercial Union Grand Prix top prize by winning his doubles match in the Argentine tennis championships Tuesday. Vilas and Manuel Orantes of Spain beat Oscar Escribano and Roberto Carruthers 5-7, 6-1, 6-2.

New AC Flights In December

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada will launch the first three of its new U.S. routes December 1, the airline announced Tuesday.

The three routes will link Edmonton and Calgary with San Francisco, Winnipeg with New York and Quebec City with New York, and are to be served by daily round-trip flights initially using 95-seat DC-9 aircraft.

The airline received final approval of the new services Tuesday from U.S. civil aviation authorities in Washington, D.C.

They are the first of 14 new trans-border services to be introduced by Air Canada between now and 1979 under terms of the bilateral agreement negotiated recently between Canada and the United States.

Two will link key population centres of the Canadian Prairies by direct air service to major tourist and business centres in the U.S.

Previously, Winnipeg passengers bound for New York were required to travel via Toronto, while those bound for San Francisco from Edmonton and Calgary found it necessary to make connecting flights over sometimes circuitous routes.

Air Canada board chairman Yves Pratte described the new services as "one of the biggest challenges for Air Canada in many years."

"These three new services will be the beginning of a program to initiate many new direct flights to the United States for Canadians in all parts of our country over the next five years," he said.

The addition of San Francisco will bring to eight the number of cities served by Air Canada out of points in Canada. The other cities are New York, Boston, Cleveland, Chicago, Miami, Tampa and Los Angeles.

Gati Takes Regina Baton

Victoria Symphony maestro Laszlo Gati has gone to Saskatchewan where he will be guest conductor of the Regina Symphony Orchestra.

Guest artist for the Saturday event which takes place in the Regina Centre for the Performing Arts is Russian violinist Igor Oistrakh who is to be guest soloist in Victoria at the next pair of symphony concerts, Dec. 1 and 2.

NOW CANCER LINKED TO BEER-DRINKERS

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two scientists say they have found a statistical relationship between beer drinking and cancer but warned that does not necessarily mean beer causes the disease.

Statistics from 41 U.S. states and 24 foreign countries show that regions with the highest per capita beer consumption generally also have high rates of rectal and intestinal cancer, the two researchers said.

The findings by Dr. James Enstrom of the UCLA School of Public Health and Dr. Norman Breslow of the University of Washington were published in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

They found a relationship between hard liquor consumption and cancer of the esophagus in men, Enstrom said, but found many more statistical relationships involving beer.

Gourt Freezes Gift To Women's Guru

VANCOUVER (CP) — A gift of $400,000 by an American heiress to the Guru Maharaj Ji has been frozen pending a ruling by the British Columbia Supreme Court on an application by the woman's sister.

Though the assets involved are in Chicago and Louisville, Ky, and the headquarters of the Divine Light Mission are in Denver, Colo., the action is being taken in B.C. because the heiress, Darby McNeal, 31, is a resident of Nelson.

Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon deferred decision.

He has been asked to order Miss McNeal to appear before a panel of psychiatrists so that they may determine her competency to handle her own affairs.

Meanwhile, the sister, Sarah McNeal Few of Louisville, has obtained injunctions in Illinois and Kentucky freezing two trust funds pending the outcome of the B.C. action.

The actions involve securities in a trust fund administered by the First National Bank of Chicago valued at $275,000; an interest in a trust administered by the Citizens' Bank of Louisville valued at $80,000, and real estate interests of aproximately $100,000.

Mrs. Few says she has no interest in the assets of her younger sister but is interested in "protecting her from herself."

A power-of-attorney signed by Miss McNeal and sworn before notary public Barbara Meyer in Surrey, Aug. 9, 1974, would give Robert Mishler, president of Divine Light Mission International in Denver, complete control over the Chicago trust and legal power over Miss McNeal's interests in the United States, evidence presented here says.

Under provisions of the Patients Estates Act, enacted by the B.C. legislature in 1962, such power-of-attorney and other documents could be void if the subject is found to be incompetent.

An affidavit filed in court registry here and entered before Mr. Justice Hutcheon gives an account by Robert Joynt, a trust officer for the Chicago bank, of efforts made in early September by representatives of the Divine Light Mission to obtain cash proceeds of the trust and of the initiation of legal action to prevent this.

Miss McNeal is now associated with the Divine Light Mission in Nelson.

Poseidon Sinks Godfather

NEW YORK (AP) — The first segment of the movie The Godfather, televised by NBC Saturday night, was easily last week's most-watched television program in the United States, A. C. Nielsen ratings figures show.

But the 1972 box office hit, seen in more than 25-million homes, still didn't draw as many viewers as expected, NBC officials said.

It failed to exceed the ratings for ABC's Oct. 27 showing of The Poseiidon adventure, the season's highest-rated theatrical movie on U.S. TV. That broadcast was seen in an estimated 27-million homes.

NBC broadcast the second segment of The Godfather Monday, but Nielsen ratings on it won't be available until next week.

The Godfather was shown in a single unit in Victoria two weeks ago.

A Bottom-Slapping Mayor

Menace to Young Girls, Or Just Earthy . . .?

LONDON (UPI) — A former Mayor of Chelsea with an admitted fondness for slapping girls on the bottom appeared in court Tuesday seeking libel damages from a newspaper which called him "a menace to young girls."

John Brooks, 64, was suing the IPC newspaper chain and journalist Michael O'Flaherty over an article which told how he invited a teenage girl to his Thames river cruiser where he spanked her bare bottom, then poured whiskey on her to take away the sting.

Lawyer Roger Gray said Brooks, married for 27 years, enjoyed slapping girls' bottoms but he was not "a dirty old man."

"Every healthy normal vigorous male is a bottom slapper in mind if not in deed," Gray said.

"He admits it with uninhibited candor," Gray said of Brooks. "But he never does it without their consent."

The newspaper told how 19-year-old, fair-haired Sue Carr answered Brooks' advertisement for "good-natured young ladies" to crew his thames cruiser. He told Miss Carr she would get $24 extra if she let herself be spanked, Gray told the court.

The following day after lunch on his boat Brooks asked the girl if she wanted the extra money and she pulled the curtains and undressed, Gray said.

Brooks slapped her with his hand as she lay naked on the bed. He then rubbed whisky on her bottom to take away the sting and bruising, and smacked her again, Gray said.

"There is no doubt that he did slap Miss Carr's bottom. He also did something which will horrify Scotsmen the world over — he poured whisky over her," said Gray.

He said Brooks, a former colonel and Japanese prisoner-of-war, was a flamboyant larger-than-life character, a "solicitor, soldier, alderman, and hunting man."

He also said Brooks "used bawdy language reminiscent of the eighteenth century hunting squire and had a similar outlook, straightforward and earthy, about sex."

FINALLY, FAME! . . . BUT FLEETING

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Raquel Jo Stubbs, who calls herself Kelly, was selected winner of a dance competition two years ago but had to stop representing San Diego when she strained a knee.

Last March, the five-foot three-inch blonde was an almost certain winner in a state gymnastic competition before she pulled a cartilage in her right knee.

A U.S. national gymnastics meet bypassed her last May when she had to undergo corrective surgery.

A week ago Kelly missed being named homecoming queen at Mt. Miguel high school by two votes.

On Oct. 21, Kelly was named Miss Teenage San Diego, and the long wait for recognition was over. Or so it seemed.

Last weekend, Kelly learned she is being disqualified because she will be 20 hours too old by the age deadline.

Kelly will turn 18 at 3:40 a.m. Dec. 31, and no contestant can be 18 on or before that date.

CATONSVILLE, Md. — Now that all of the Rohrer quintuplets are home from the hospital, their parents say one of the biggest problems is telling them apart.

"I don't really know how to tell who's who," their mother, Karen Rohrer, said Tuesday.

PEKING — The Chinese foreign ministry Tuesday broke its silence on the sensitive subject of Premier Chou En-lai's health — but only dismissed as "a rumor" a report that the 76-year-old head of government has been operated on for stomach cancer.

NEW YORK — A businessman kidnapped from his Long Island home at gunpoint a week ago has been released after payment of a $750,000 ransom, the FBI said today. Jack Teich, 34, of Kings Point, co-owner of Acme Steel Partition Co., was released near Kennedy International Airport late Tuesday. He was reported in good condition.

STONEHAM, Mass. — Somewhere in the Boston area, someone runs a car identical to the one sitting on blocks in Arthur Halpin's backyard. Even the licence numbers are the same, although Halpin has turned in his plates. The unknown person commits parking violations, and Halpin gets the summonses for the unpaid tickets — about 200 of them over the last 18 months.

PRINCE RUPERT — Chief James Gosnell of the New Aiyansh reserve about 70 miles northeast of here, in the Nass Valley was elected president of the Nishga tribal council Tuesday at the council's annual convention. MLA Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin), long-time president of the council, was named director of land evaluation, a new position designed to handle land negotiations with the federal government.

BONN — An investigating commission has spared former chancellor Willy Brandt any direct blame for a West German spy scandal that prompted his resignation last May. But it heaped criticism on Horst Ehmke, Brandt's one-time chief of staff, and on West Germany's security services for giving "speed precedence over caution" in granting secret clearance to Guenter Guillaume in January, 1970.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Beverly Harrell, operator of a house of prostitution in central Nevada, has requested a recount of the votes in her losing race for the state assembly.

Ms Harrell lost to Don Moody of Hawthorne by 2,673 votes to 2,554 in the three-county district.

GREYHOUND DRIVERS WAIT FOR TALKS

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Drivers and other employees were reported waiting today for Greyhound Bus Lines to initiate another round of talks in Phoenix aimed at settling a three-day walkout across the United States.

Meanwhile, travellers struggled to find other means of transportation.

Greyhound and its 16,000 employees who belong to the ALF-CIO Amalgamated Transit Union have met sporadically since the strike began, at the urging of federal mediator Guy Parent. However, no progress was reported after the latest session, a 2½-hour meeting Tuesday.

The strike began Monday after negotiators failed to produce a new contract to replace the one that expired Oct. 31.

The union has demanded an 18-month contract providing a 60-cent hourly wage increase to drivers now making about $5.76 an hour.

Greyhound has offered a 30-month contract, a union spokesman said.

Continental Trailways bus lines and Amtrak were honoring Greyhound tickets. Some airlines reported increased demands for reservations.

Newfoundland Slammed by Rising Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Rising consumer prices hit St. John's, Nfld., hardest of the 14 cities surveyed by Statistics Canada during October, while Ottawa — the only city in which the food index did not rise — suffered least from higher prices.

The cost of living in St. John's increased 1.5 per cent compared with Ottawa's four-tenths of one per cent, the government agency said in its regular monthly survey.

Most cities had lower prices for beef and fresh produce than in September, but dairy and cereal products, processed fruits and vegetables were higher.

Clothing costs were higher in all cities. Except for Halifax, all cities had higher expenses for housing and for recreation and education.

Higher dentists' fees drove health costs up, while tobacco costs were generally higher and alcoholic beverages cost more in Alberta and B.C. cities.

Following are the price increases by city during October for all goods and for the major index components — food, housing and clothing:

St. John's, Nfld.: all items, 1.5 per cent; food 3.8 per cent; housing two-tenths of one per cent; clothing 1.1 per cent.

Halifax: all items, four-tenths of one per cent; food 2.4 per cent; housing down 1.4 per cent; clothing eight-tenths of one per cent.

Saint John, N.B.: all items, nine-tenths of one per cent; food 1.7 per cent; housing two-tenths of one per cent; clothing 1.3 per cent.

Quebec City: all items, nine-tenths of one per cent; food .5 per cent; housing seven-tenths of one per cent; clothing 1.6 per cent.

Montreal: all items, one per cent; food .8 per cent; housing five-tenths of one per cent; clothing one per cent.

Ottawa: all items, four-tenths of one per cent; food down three-tenths of one per cent; housing 1.1 per cent; clothing 1.1 per cent.

Toronto: all items, nine-tenths of one per cent; food one per cent; housing 1.1 per cent; clothing five-tenths of one per cent.

Thunder Bay, Ont.: all items, seven-tenths of one per cent; food one-tenth of one per cent; housing 1.1 per cent; clothing 1.3 per cent.

Winnipeg: all items, 1.2 per cent; food 2.1 per cent; housing 1.7 per cent; clothing 1.1 per cent.

Saskatoon-Regina: all items, nine-tenths of one per cent; food 1.1 per cent; housing nine-tenths of one per cent; clothing 1.2 per cent.

Edmonton-Calgary: all items, 1.3 per cent; food 1.8 per cent; housing 1.5 per cent; clothing one per cent.

Vancouver: all items, eight-tenths of one per cent; food 1.2 per cent; housing one per cent; clothing two-tenths of one per cent.

46,000 CLAIMS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A total of 46,000 claims were opened with the Insurance Corporation of B.C. in October, bringing the tally to 291,000 since the compulsory Autoplan vehicle insurance was started March 1, 1974, ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick says.

Bortnick said car thefts were up 34 per cent in Burnaby and thefts from cars were up 41 per cent compared with 1973. ICBC and Burnaby RCMP are conducting an anti-auto theft campaign, he added.

5-Year Sentence On Rape Charge

NANAIMO (CP) — Roy Darwin, 19, of Nanaimo was sentenced to five years in prison Monday after being convicted of rape. He was given three years concurrent term for abduction with intent and possession of a dangerous weapon. Darwin was charged after a married woman was raped here Aug. 28 after being abducted at gun point.

Lowest Production Since January 1974

OTTAWA (CP) — Declines in manufacturing and retail trade contributed to a further drop in domestic production in September to the lowest level since January, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The figures on domestic production were the most complete indication yet that the economy had turned downward in the third quarter.

The level of production in September was five-tenths of one per cent below the February level.

The report comes a day after Finance Minister John Turner brought in a federal budget with tax cuts to put more money in the pockets of consumers.

Figures on gross national product during the third quarter — the value of total production of the economy during the period — are due out in about a week.

The figures released Tuesday were Statistics Canada's indexes of real domestic product, which are measures of the real value of production discounting the effects of inflation.

The September index was down three-tenths of one per cent from August and the index for the third quarter was two-tenths of one per cent less than the second quarter index.

The index of real domestic product is made up of several component indexes for the major producing segments.

Retail trade, which accounts for about eight per cent of economic activity, was down by 3.3 per cent in September. Mr. Turner's tax cuts probably were intended to counter the decline in retail trade.

Figures on manufacturing production were released earlier in the week.

This segment accounts for one-quarter of domestic production and there was a 1.1 per cent decline during the third quarter. In September, the index was off nine-tenths of one per cent compared with August.

There was an indication of more declines to come with the report last week that manufacturers' new orders were down 1.8 per cent in September.

Agriculture production was off by 2.7 per cent during the third quarter, despite a gain of eight-tenths of one per cent in September. This segment accounts for 4½ per cent of domestic production.

Strikes — notably by grain handlers and rubber workers — were one factor in the third quarter slump but the drop in demand as reflected in retail trade figures was more significant.

The index for retail trade in cars and trucks was off 17 per cent in September, for department stores 1.9 per cent and for hardware stores 4.2 per cent.

Dime Cigars Stay

MONTREAL (CP) — Imperial Tobacco Ltd. announced Tuesday it will not increase the price of various brands of small cigars in light of additional taxation on cigars announced in the federal budget Monday.

Jean-Louis Mercier, company vice-president of finance, said as small cigars selling for less than 10 cents each would be penalized too heavily by the new tax rate, the company has decided to absorb the additional cost.

But Imperial Tobacco cigars selling for 10 cents or more will be increased in price immediately, increasing the retail price by one cent, he said.

Soviet Pianist Enjoys Good Life at Home

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Nicolai Petrov is an enthusiast. When he likes things he says so. Or if they're collectible he collects them.

When you interview him he talks easily and directly, giving you answers to questions you might ask but haven't even formulated yet.

Spontaneously, smiling through the smoke of his Russian cigarette, the Soviet pianist who had sent the weekend's symphony audiences into raptures, commented: The audience here is most sensitive . . . so quiet and attentive . . . and your orchestra is very good . . . the wind section is beautiful."

And a little later, again without any prompting: "This city really needs a new concert hall. The orchestra must have a better place to play in."

The opening was irresistible. Would he care to give his opinion of the Royal Theatre? He paused, choosing from among his more than adequate supply of English words.

"I do not know about the auditorium and foyers too much — but have you been backstage and downstairs?" He looked at me, raising an eyebrow.

At 31 years of age, Petrov has travelled in over 30 countries and played with most of the great European and United States orchestra. He has performed in Britain and extensively in Canada and with major Canadian orchestras, but this is his first appearance in Victoria.

Tonight he will give a solo recital at McPherson Playhouse, where his program will include Liszt, Schumann and Prokofiev.

He travels between seven and eight months of every year as his professional career intensifies and has little time now, for his other enthusiasms — super cars and jazz music.

However, he sustains his collector's passion for jazz recordings with Canadian Oscar Peterson high among his favorites.

"I am sad that I must miss Peterson who is in Moscow this week," he says.

As to automobiles, he owns a brand new Fiat 125. Russian speed limits permit 40-50 miles an hour in Moscow itself. Outside the city there is no limit, but then there are many fewer cars, Petrov points out.

Married and with his wife expecting their first child, Petrov says that he has "bought a suburb house." It is in a forest, he says, and has "about a hectacre" of land around it (approximatly 350 by 350 feet).

Petrov enjoys using tools, has a well equipped workbench — he doesn't worry about his hands and no, they're not insured — and is building furniture and fittings for his new home.

He also has a small apartment in Moscow for which he pays 45 rubles a month — about $60. This includes such services as light gas and water.

He thinks food in Moscow is about the same in cost as in Canada, especially in restaurants, but other things are much cheaper. Phone calls for example, are two cents; you can take a taxi for a reasonable distance for 10 cents; bus fare is four cents; the subway five cents.

In Russia the many fine orchestras have no worries about finances. They are totally subsidized by the government as are the theatres and the ballet.

Concerning concert tours, artists come under the management of government bureaus — one bureau manages international tours, one concerts throughout Russia, another, concerts within the Soviet bloc.

An omniverous reader at home, when he travels Petrov likes detective novels. Mostly they're in French.

He could be said to collect languages too for he speaks French and German fluently and is as he put it, "comfortable in English."

When he is travelling he does not practise much, but likes to see what is going on and look at all the things that travellers usually enjoy, like Butchart Gardens, for instance.

As our interview concluded Laszlo Gati arrived ("a fine conductor and a pleasure to work with") and the two went off to the legislative buildings to attend an afternoon session where Nicolai Petrov could hopefully collect another new experience watching democracy at work.

INSPECTIONS 'A FARCE'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nursing home safety inspections are "a national farce" despite constant government rhetoric heralding crackdowns and fund cutoffs, a U.S. senate report said Tuesday.

The 161-page report also said an alarming number of the one million elderly patients in 23,000 nursing homes "have actually encountered abuse and physical danger, including unsanitary conditions, fire hazards, poor or unwholesome food, infections, adverse drug reactions, over tranquillization and frequent medication errors."

Exercise Can Be Killer

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A surgical technique to increase blood flow to the heart restores such a feeling of health in some patients that they are lured to their death through over exercise, a doctor says.

Dr. Ara Tilkian of the Palo Alto, Calif., Veterans' Administration Hospital said Monday that some patients receiving the surgery lose the chest pains which once limited their activity.

Without the pain, he said, they can sometimes exercise themselves into new problems.

Exercise which is too severe can cause them to develop arrhythmias, or irregular heart beats.

"In our studies, one man got a lethal level of arrhythmias," said Tilkian.

The absence of the chest pain removes a natural limiting factor, he said, and creates the need for doctors to establish a maximum exercise level for the patients.

Tilkian reported on a study of a group of patients who received a coronary bypass. This is a procedure to establish a new path for blood to flow to the heart in patients with blocked arteries. The procedure involves grafting a vein, usually from the patient's leg, onto the diseased artery. The graft is attached upstream and downstream of the artery block to establish a clear blood flow.

In a comparison with a group of heart patients treated without the surgery, he said: "It was clear that the patients assigned to the surgical group were able to exercise more, and much fewer of this group developed chest pains."

The surgical group, however, had "a tendency to develop more severe arrhythmias."

Tilkian said such surgical patients should be evaluated to establish their precise level of safe exercise.

PENSIONS FOR WIVES OVER TO PROVINCES

OTTAWA (CP) — The issue of Canada Pension Plan coverage for housewives may come before federal and provincial welfare ministers this spring, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday.

At present, housewives do not participate in the plan as contributors or full beneficiaries. There has been pressure from members of all political parties and from women's groups for a change in the law.

Lalonde said the issue has been referred to the Canada Pension Plan advisory board and the Advisory Council on the Status of Women. Reports are expected at the end of this year or early in 1975. The issue may then come before the ministers at a planned conference in the spring.

WELFARE CHIEFS INCH SLOWLY ALONG

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial welfare ministers inched toward a new income maintenance system for the poor Tuesday but put up some resistance to nudgings from the Manitoba delegation for a speedier consideration of costs.

The ministers, continuing a two-year review of the social security system, eliminated some income maintenace options in their closed meeting but must still decide on one, or a combination, of three other proposals.

The remaining options are understood to include a system of income supplements for the working poor plus a guarantee for those unable to work, a guaranteed annual income applied universally and a tax credit system designed to help those in need.

Federal Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde, who began the overhaul of welfare programs in April, 1973, said the ministers are reaching the stage where policy decisions are being made.

Mr. Lalonde said at the close of the first day of the two-day conference that the ministers will have several more meetings before the spring. The ministers had hoped to work out a basic pattern for an income maintenance system at this meeting.

Earlier Tuesday, Saul Miller, Manitobas' minister, called for some discussion of financing of the proposed revised program.

In a speech, Miller said costs should be considered, because failure to talk about money could have a negative effect on the talks.

"With about five months remaining until the conference, at which it appears we will have to make some final, and pernaps irreversible decisions about the future nature and direction of social security programming in this country, I think it is essential that we begin now to face the financing issue directly — and in a positive way," Miller said.

JOBLESS BENEFITS TO RISE

OTTAWA (CP) — The maximum weekly unemployment insurance benefit will rise to $123 from $113 Jan. 1.

Maximum benefit and the maximum weekly insurable earnings, on which payments are based, rise each year in accordance with increases in employee earnings.

Maximum weekly insurance earnings will rise Jan. 1 to $185 from $170 this year.

DIEF DEMANDS FULL FACTS ON SUGAR

OTTAWA (CP) — The sugar industry has been asked for statistics that will show whether it has been forcing up the price of sugar by stockpiling.

Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet told John Diefenbaker that he had some of the information, but would not make a statement until he had all of it.

Diefenbaker said the sugar companies had "outrageously 'upped" the price of their product without regard for the consumer.

He said if the companies' figures showed an inventory increase between Jan. 1 and July 1, it would mean they are "piling up additional costs to the Canadian people.'

The current price of refined sugar averages about 60 cents a pound and there has been speculation it might hit the $1 mark early next year.

Cabinet Tizzy Over Alta. Rap

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The strong reaction to proposals for resource taxation in the federal budget, voiced by Premier Peter Lougheed has clearly shaken the federal cabinet.

The vehement and immediate reaction of the Alberta premier was not expected.

One federal government spokesman said wryly: "We had just run up the flag of truce and it was shot to ribbons."

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, meanwhile admitted Tuesday the government will be powerless to stop any increases in domestic oil prices imposed by Alberta until a new petroleum administration act is approved.

A federal-provincial agreement reached during meetings last winter to freeze the domestic price of oil at $6.50 a barrel is voluntary, Macdonald said. There is nothing to prevent the western province from pulling out.

The issue is rapidly building into the biggest and touchiest federal-provincial confrontation to take place since the Pearson period.

Tory MPs are privately predicting Ottawa is bringing on a constitutional confrontation that can only end up in the Supreme Court of Canada.

Big question here is will the other provincial governments line up with Alberta?

"This will be the major issue of this parliament," G. W. Baldwin (PC — Peace River) official Opposition House leader said.

"The Liberals will bring in all their backbenchers to do as they are told and vote against us, they have clearly set out to disrupt confederation."

Conflict Guide: Complete Farce

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition leader Stanfield charged Tuesday that the Liberal government has made a complete farce of its conflict of interest regulations by exempting from controls the wives and husbands of cabinet ministers.

Stanfield asked Prime Minister Trudeau why "a very substantial period of time" is allowed before ministers are required to register their arrangements for disposing of or declaring their private interests, and noted that spouses of ministers are not covered under the guidelines laid down by Trudeau last year.

"How is he going to overcome any suspicion that this would provide a minister with the opportunity of transferring embarrassing resources to his or her spouse?" Stanfield demanded.

The prime minister replied that he thinks the guidelines should be implemented as soon as reasonably possible.

"In the case of some ministers," he said, "this really means immediately, and in other cases this means disposing of various forms of holdings, which very often cannot be done overnight and takes some time."

In the meantime, Trudeau added, it is his responsibility and that of the minister concerned to make sure no "conflict of interest situations" arise.

OTTAWA BEEF

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has sent a formal note to Washington protesting United States' restrictions on Canadian beef imports to that country.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Tuesday the note asks for "immediate consultations" on the whole question of farm trade.

The note will be followed by a visit to Washington by himself or Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie, he added.

Mr. Whelan said he regards Canadian quotas, which restrict imports of U.S. beef and cattle to levels equal those during the average of the last five years, as perfectly fair.

But he added that U.S. controls against imports of domestic beef, cattle, hogs and pork are contrary to trading arrangements outlined in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

A Parcel of Firsts In Vancouver Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver voters go to the polls today to choose the people who will run their civic affairs for the next two years.

A total of 257,474 persons are registered to vote, including 120,647 property owners and 136,827 tenants. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Municipal officials say there are several firsts in this election:

—It is the first time Vancouver voters will directly choose representatives to the Greater Vancouver Regional District board of directors; of the 44 aldermanic and four mayoral candidates, 38 also are running for the five regional posts;

—For the first time someone with a registered company office here, Canadian citizen or not, cannot cast a vote, as a result of a 1973 city charter amendment;

—Also for the first time, tenants as well as property owners will be able to vote on a money bylaw in a civic election.

Council is seeking authority to borrow $65.7 million for the 1976-1980 five-year capital plan for various public works and park development projects. The measure needs 50 per cent approval to pass.

Four candidates are seeking the mayoralty, including incumbent Art Phillips, 44, an investment analyst on the Electors' Action Movement slate. Schoolteacher and travel agent George Puil, also 44, is running for the Non-Partisan Association. New Democratic candidate is Brian Campbell, 30, a college instructor.

Artist Vincent Trasvo, 27, an independent, has appeared throughout the campaign in a Mr. Peanut costume.

In addition to the 44 aldermanic candidates, 31 are seeking school board seats, and 25 want parks board posts.

In the 1972 election there were four mayoral candidates; 55 for alderman, 35 for school board and 31 for park board. There were no GVRD candidates.

Voter turnout in 1972 was 31.8 per cent.

City Clerk Doug Little said Tuesday 686 persons voted in the advance poll this year, 82 more than in 1972.

The turnout in 1968 and 1970 was 44 per cent and 45.5 per cent respectively. The record turnout since amalgamation with South Vancouver was in 1934 when 55 per cent voted. The low was in 1956 when only 26 per cent voted.

Since the election date has been shifted to November from the previous mid-December date, municipal officials say more people may go to the polls today.

SOCREDS SEEK MINES CASH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the mining industry are being asked to give the British Columbia Social Credit party financial help.

Austin Taylor, who describes himself as an unofficial party worker, sent a form letter to people listed in the British Columbia-Yukon chamber of mines directory.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Two 18-year-old Kamloops youths were sentenced Tuesday to three months in jail and their drivers' licences were suspended for two years on charges of dangerous driving. Davinder Singh Gill and Robert Allan Klim were charged after an accident Aug. 17 near Monte Creek, 12 miles east of here, in which three people were killed when four cars racing abreast collided with a camper.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Orchardist Robert Kennedy, 46, of Oliver, charged last July 17 with obstructing and assaulting a police officer, was involved in a motor vehicle accident Tuesday on his way to provincial court here for trial. As a result of the accident Kennedy was charged with hit-and-run driving and assaulting a police officer.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A shortage of 20,000 housing units in the Greater Vancouver district is increasing at the rate of 5,000 units a year, Rod McKenzie, president of the Greater Vancouver Branch of the Housing and Urban Development Assn. of Canada, said Tuesday. His branch is establishing a committee to research problems facing municipalities under pressure to permit more housing development, he added.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal product safety specialists Tuesday seized 85 rolls of the same kind of material used in a nightgown that burst into flames and resulted in the death of a three-year-old girl last week. Denise Holmstrom of Surrey died in hospital Wednesday of burns over 80 per cent of her body, two days after her nightgown caught fire while she was playing with matches.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A representative of the fire warden's office said Tuesday a fire which damaged a night club and a school was definitely caused by arson. The investigator said gasoline was poured from a tin can onto the middle of the night club floor. The school is below the club. Building owner George Boutakis said he didn't know why anyone would want to destroy the building.

TROIKA TO RUN PORT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand appointed a three-man executive committee Tuesday that will be given the authority for daily management of the Port of Vancouver.

Chairman is Glen W. McPherson, retired president of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., who is also chairman of the Vancouver Port Authority. Other members are Vancouver business executive J. Norman Hyland and Gordon Draeseke, president of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia.

The present 10 members of the VPA all have had their terms of office extended for another year.

Loneliness of Long-Distance Lover Snarled in Ottawa's Red Tape

VANCOUVER (CP) — Italian-born Quaglia Luciano lives here, his fiancee lives in Ecuador and the Immigration delays he blames for keeping them apart is driving him crazy.

"Thirteen months ago I applied to have my girl friend Elsy Romero, 29, come to this country and nothing seems to happen," the 35-year-old barber said Tuesday.

"It is making me mad at the Immigration people and it is driving me crazy that she can't come here."

He said he's done everything possible to have his wife-to-be become a Canadian — even to purchasing a marriage licence.

"They they tell me — after it has expired — that I didn't need it in the first place. It is things like this and the frustration that is making me mad."

Luciano came to Canada 10 years ago.

He said he has been out with girls, but when he met Miss Romero in Los Angeles where she was visiting her sister in May, 1973, it was the beginning of the real thing.

"She had to go back to Ecuador because her mother became seriously ill, but we kept in contact by phone and letter and well — we fell in love."

Gerald Elliott, program specialist with the Immigration Department, said Tuesday that Luciano should not worry, that there is still hope.

He agreed there have been unfortunate but unaccountable delays — possibly through the handling of Ecuadorian immigration applications through a new office set up in neighboring Columbia and the necessity of having a Canadian doctor in Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, check Miss Romero's medical papers.

"Her papers were completed four weeks ago," he said. "A decision is not overdue yet.

"We should hear something in a couple of weeks. It's not our wish to see love wither on the vine."

"I hope he's right," said Luciano. "I have gone through hell. This love is driving me crazy."

Soup From Hell's Kitchen

Ideal chowder for Grey Cup party

By MARY MOORE

Do you know where Hell's Kitchen is? It is at Hell's Gate Airtram Restaurant halfway up the Fraser River and to get there you have to ride in a glass airlift over a canyon so deep I do not want to think about it. But it was exciting.

At the bottom of the ride is Hell's Kitchen with Mrs. Weatherly doing the cooking—including this superb Salmon Chowder I am about to describe. If you do not make it it is your own fault—for you will miss a treat of a lifetime. It will serve 10 and would be ideal if you are having a party to watch the Grey Cup game on your T.V.

HELL'S KITCHEN SALMON CHOWDER
(serves 10)

½ c. (¼ lb.) melted butter
1 large stalk celery—1 c. chopped
1 large onion chopped—1 c. preferably Spanish
2 c. diced (½") raw potatoes
½ c. flour
1 tsp. M.S.G. (accent-optional)
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ to ½ tsp. salt
1 qt (5 c.) milk.
one 6-oz. can evaporated milk
2 c. salmon or 1 lb. cooked or two 7¾-oz. cans (see below)

In a large heavy pot melt the butter and add the prepared celery, onion and potatoes. Gently saute for 20 minutes stirring often. Do not brown at all—just soak the vegetables with butter and half cook them. Stir together the flour, M.S.G. (if used), pepper and salt and stir in to the half-cooked vegetables until blended. Slowly add the milk and evaporated milk stirring until thick. Flake the salmon and add it too. If canned is used be SURE to add the can liquid. Bring just to below boiling point and serve at once in preheated bowls.

Note: This chowder is thick and of course should be served as a main course with a hot bread such as cheese tea biscuits supreme or garlic bread or wheat germ or bran muffins. Make a double batch of biscuits or muffins if you are the hostess to the Grey Cup party.

Now all you have to do is catch your salmoon (OR rea catch your salmon (OR reach for it on the grocer's shelf).

Thank you Mrs. Weatherly for a rib-sticking, heart-warming recipe for Grey Cup fans.

And yet another square recipe for your bulging file.

The predominating flavour of these squares is orange although they call for ¾ cup of applesauce. During these fall months I suppose nearly every cook in Canada produces some applesauce so I hope they will be as easy for you to make as it was for us.

ORANGE SQUARES (9x12")

6 tbsp. (⅜ c.) butter or margarine
1 c. light brown sugar (packed)
1 orange (grated rind and juice — see below)
1 tsp. vanilla
¾ c. applesauce
1 egg, beaten
1½ c. unsifted cake-and-pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
½ c. chopped nuts (I used walnuts)

Glaze:

1½ c. unsifted icing sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
½ tsp. vanilla
3 tbsp. orange juice (from above mentioned orange) grated rind of HALF of above mentioned orange
1 tbsp. hot water

To make Batter, in heavy pot melt butter or margarine and brown sugar. Remove from heat and add grated rind of ONE-HALF of the orange, vanilla, applesauce and beaten egg and combine thoroughly. Measure in flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt and beat until smooth. Stir in nuts. Pour into a greased 9x12" baking dish and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 15 to 18 minutes. Remove from oven and let cool in dish on cake rack for about 10 minutes while you make the glaze.

To make the Glaze in a bowl beat together all Glaze ingredients until smooth and spread over baked squares while it is still warm. Let cool thoroughly before cutting.

YOUR TURN TO PREPARE: STUFFED MUSHROOMS

By JEAN BUNCH

(Today's reader recipe was sent in by Jean Bunch, 1026 Greig, Brentwood. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would gladly share, please sent it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

Since I'm not a very good cook, recipes like this one for raw stuffed mushrooms are fun for me.

A friend gave me the recipe a long time ago when I needed a quick, easy hors d'oeuvre. Don't shy away from the "raw" — the results are excellent.

RAW STUFFED MUSHROOMS

4 tiny white mushrooms per person
1 8-ounce package cream cheese curry powder
milk or sherry

Remove stems from mushrooms and save stems for later use in soup or gravy. Soften cream cheese at room temperature or add a little milk, or sherry, if you want a bit of a kick to the stuffing.

Combine softened cream cheese with curry to taste. Stuff mixture into mushroom crowns and serve.

Vitamin-Rich Foliage Grows in Many Lawns

When most of us think about wild greens, we think of (1) something bitter that (2) grows away back in the woods and (3) can be harvested only during the summer. Well that's not at all true . . . and you need look no further than the common chickweed to prove it.

Common chickweed (Stellaria media) is (1) so mild that most devotees mix it with something more pungent just to give it a little flavor. the plant (2) thrives so well in lawns, fields and vegetable patches that farmers and gardeners consider it to be a pest and (3) it's so hearty that its vitamin-laden foliage can be gathered year-round throughout most of the continental United States and in some parts of Canada.

Look for a low, sprawling plant with pale-green, tender and juicy stems that are so thin and weak they break easily. The leaves are about a half inch long and a quarter inch across, have a rounded profile except for a rather definite point on their tips and grow in opposite pairs on slender little branches. Small (a quarter inch across), white, star-shaped (five petals) flowers which open on sunny days and close at night are displayed by the plant: year-round in the north-central United States and southward . . . during the spring, summer and fall throughtout summer and fall throughout Canada.

Pick chickweed by the handful, wash it and chop the plant into salads. Or cover stronger greens (mustard, dandelion, watercress, etc.) with water, boil them for 10 minutes, chop your Stellaria media into the pot and boil everything for another minute or two. Serve with salt, pepper, butter, bits of fresh onion and finely crumbled bacon. You'll have a dish that's as good as greens can be!

Best of all, chickweed is rich in vitamin C and can be harvested right through the coldest weather in almost all areas of Canada and the United States.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Fad Diets Lack Essential Nutrients

By Dr. JEAN MAYER

Every year, it seems that we are "blessed" with some new miracle reducing diet, and so far, 1974 has produced two: One is the so-called "HCG-500 calorie" clinic diet. The other, the "1000 calorie, cider vinegar, lecithin, kelp and B6 diet."

As with most fad diets, both of these promise a fast and painless way of shedding weight. Each takes into account the fact that if you drastically reduce the number of calories you eat, you surely will lose weight. But this is about the only legitimate feature of either diet.

Neither provides an adequate amount of essential nutrients. And the gimmicks each rely on have absolutely no value in weight reduction. Indeed, the HCG diet calls for the use of human chorionic gonadotropin, a hormone that does nothing for weight reduction, and may pose sufficient risk that the legal experts at the Food and Drug Administration are looking into it.

Regarding the cider vinegar diet, one of its main ingredients is kelp which, if consumed in very large amounts, contains enough iodine to be a hazard for some people. Cider vinegar and lecithin have no recognized nutritional value. On the other hand, Vitamin B6 is, indeed, an essential nutrient. But it cannot, as claimed by the diet's advocates, produce a loss in weight by regulating the body's water balance. This is just not one of B6's many functions.

The importance of B6 for humans was discovered quite by accident in the mid-1950s when a number of babies between the age of six months and a year from all parts of the country developed symptons of irritability, muscular twitchings and convulsions. Dr. O. L. Kline of the U.S. Federal Drug Adminis ration had noted similar symptons in rats fed a diet deficient in Vitamin B6, and he suggested this might be the cause. It turned out to be the fact, for when the babies were given B6, they promptly recovered. Further investiga ion revealed that the infants had been fed entirely on a canned liquid formula, which had been sterilized at temperatures high enough to destroy most of the Vitamin B6. As a result, baby food manufacturers today fortify their products with this essential vitamin, but only after sterilization.

Other signs of B6 deficiency include an oily skin eruption around the eyes and mouth, a red, smooth tongue, dizziness and nausea. Anemia, kidney stones and severe nervous disturbances also may develop. Happily, each of these symptoms (except for the kidney stones) can be quickly reversed with supplements of Vitamin B6.

Although there is still much research to be done, we have learned a great deal about the function of this vitamin. It is particularly important in protein metabolism, the formation of amino acids and in the production of niacin. B3 also helps convert the "animal starch" stored in muscles to glucose, the form of sugar that the body can then burn for energy. And B6 is essential for the formation of red blood cells and antibodies to protect us against infections.

The Recommended Dietary Allowance, first established only in 1968, is 2 milligrams per day for adults. However, the need is greater during pregnancy and breast feeding, in old age, and in people taking certain drugs, including some forms of penicillin and steroid contraceptives. Persons with diets high in protein or sugar also need more B6.

Good sources of the vitamin are whole-grain flours and cereals, wheat germ and bran, potatoes and some other vegetables, liver, poultry, fish, nuts and brewer's yeast. If you plan a balanced diet with a variety of fresh foods, your intake of Vitamin B6 will probably be adequate.

One thing is for sure. B6 supplements are not necessary for weight reduction. If you want to lose permanent weight, cut down on calories and increase your physical acticity. And if you want to save money, cut out fad diets!

PEACH TRIFLE

Custard Sauce:

1 egg yolk
2 teaspoons sugar
Dash salt
½ teaspoon cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup scalded milk

Beat yolk. Add sugar, salt, cornstarch and vanilla. Blend small amount of hot milk into egg mixture then stir egg into remaining hot milk. Stir and cook until slightly thickened. Chill. Makes 2-3 cup.

Trifle:

1 10-ounce can peach slices
2-3 cup white cake crumbs
¼ cup syrup from peaches
Few drops almond extract
2-3 cup Custard Sauce
Whipped cream (optional)

Drain peaches reserving syrup. Dice peaches reserving two slices for garnish. Arrange cake crumbs and peaches in two dessert dishes. Top with syrup and almond extract then custard sauce. Chill. Garnish with reserved peach slices and whipped cream if desired. 2 servings.

Pineapple, croutons in dressing

Ham Stuffing Hawaiian Style

Whether that special ham dinner is served in the tropics or on snow-drifted plains, choose Hawaiian Stuffing as a make-on-the-range accompaniment. Be sure to check the cupboard before you shop, though. The ingredients are likely to be there already — a can of pineapple chunks, a bit of margarine and brown sugar, a package of herb seasoned croutons and some nuts and raisins. Stuffing couldn't be much easier . . . or much tastier.

HAWAIIAN STUFFING

1 can (20 oz.) pineapple chunks;
½ cup regular margarine or butter;
3 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar;
1 pkg. (7 oz., 7 cups) herb seasoned croutons;
¼ cup coarsely chopped nuts;
¼ cup seedless raisins.

Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Add enough water to syrup to measure 2 cups liquid. Place margarine, sugar and the 2 cups liquid in large saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture begins to bubble. Remove from heat.

Add herb seasoned croutons all at one time, tossing lightly until croutons are evenly and thoroughly moistened. Add pineapple, nuts and raisins. Toss lightly again. Spread evenly in greased 13½ x9 x2-inch (3 quart) glass baking dish.

Bake in oven at 350 degrees F. about 25 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve hot as an accompaniment for ham.

Yield: 8 servings, ½ cup each.

Rice All-Present Food On Indonesian Tables

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

BALI, Indonesia (NYT) — It is somewhat astonishing that despite early exposure to European tastes and techniques, hardly anything but the smallest mark of Western influence has been left on Balinese kitchen culture.

After all, Marco Polo, an Italian and Ambassador to the Great Khan of Mongolia, landed in Bali in 1292. And a group of Dutch sailors, led by a man named Cornelius Houtman touched shore here nearly 1,400 years ago. But neither they nor their ancestors seem to have left any imprint on the cuisine.

We explored the subject with Wija Wawo-Runtu, the tall, energetic and affluent proprietor of the small but estemmed Tandjung Sari compound-type hotel here that may very well have the best Indonesian cooking in Bali.

As his wife, Tatie, an uncompromisingly good cook in the native tradition listened, the gentleman told us that the minimal mark on cooking left by the Dutch colonials might very well be a commentary on Dutch cooking in Holland.

By contrast, Wawo-Runtu continued, there are numerous strong elements in the Indonesian kitchen suggestive of other cultures, including the Chinese and Indian. The Chinese, with their soy bean culture (soy sauce, bean curd, etc.) arrived in the region during the seventh century. Indian influences of undated origin are apparent in many curry-type dishes.

We had the good fortune of pursuing the foods of Indonesia by watching Mrs. Wawo-Runtu as she prepared food for a private feast in her own kitchen.

As we spoke, Mrs. Wawo-Runtu was in the process of preparing one of the consummately great soups of the world, an Indonesian soto ajam.

Rice, she noted as she rinsed out the good blend of spices into simmering broth, is the omnipresent food on all Indonesian tables. In fact, all of the country's traditional foods seem designed to complement or be complemented by rice — i.e. they are spicy, salty or otherwise flavor-assertive and are frequently of a stew-like nature.

The basic cooking liquid for most dishes, she added, is coconut milk, made by kneading and sieving freshly grated coconut blended with water.

One of its virtues is that, unlike milk, it tends to thicken and become sauce-like as it cooks without the addition of a starch such as flour or cornstarch.

Various seasonings, almost unknown in North America but which play an enormous role in Indonesian flavors, are lemon grass (it vaguely resembles a green onion, although not in flavor); Laos (a root that vaguely resembles ginger but not in flavor) and scented leaves such as kunir, lemon and salam.

Bean curd plays many roles here and so does a nonsweet soya bean "cake" that looks like a flat, dry white seeded nougat candy.

Macadamia nuts are frequently ground to give richness and body to main courses and sauces.

To someone fairly well-schooled in the Western kitchen, one of the most intriguing discoveries here is the free-wheeling use to which shallots are put. Shallots, the most delicate member of the onion family, have long been a hallmark of fine French cooking and though elevated in price, are gradually becoming part of the American repertory.

SOTO AJAM

(An elaborate soup with chicken)

Soup:
5 pounds meaty beef bones
2 3- to 3½-pound chickens left whole
8 macadamia nuts
2 teaspoons coriander seeds
One-third cup chopped shallots
3 cloves garlic
1½ teaspoons turmeric (see note)
salt to taste
3 tablespoons peanut or corn oil
1 stalk of lemon grass (see note) or ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate, optional.

The Garnishes:
3 small, red, waxy "new" potatoes fat for deep frying
2½ cups peeled shallots
2 ounces bean thread (also known as Chinese vermicelli, celophane noodles and so on, see note)
3 cups bean sprouts (see note)
3 cups finely shredded white cabbage
6 hard-cooked eggs, peeled
½ cup finely chopped celery leaves sambal soto (see recipe)
lime wedges

Place the beef bones in a kettle and add cold water to cover. Bring to the boil and drain immediately. Chill under cold water. Return the bones to the kettle and add enough cold water to cover both the bones and the chickens when they are added (see Step 2). Bring to the boil.

When the water boils add the chickens. If the chickens are not covered with water, add enough boiling water to cover them.

Blend or, using a mortar and pestle, grind together the macadamia nuts, corinader seeds, the one third cup of shallots, the garlic, turmeric and salt.

Heat the three tablespoons of oil in a small skillet and add the spice mixture. Rinse out the blender or mortar with a little water and add it to the skillet. Cook, stirring about one minute and add the lemon grass. Continue cooking about three minutes stirring. Add this mixture to the soup. And salt to taste and the monosodium glutamate.

Cook the soup, uncovered, about one hour or until the chickens are thoroughly tender. Remove the chickens and let cool. Discard the beef bones. Let the soup simmer slowly.

Meanwhile, prepare the garnishes.

Peel the potatoes and cut them as for potato chips into very thin slices, ⅛-inch thick or less. Drop immediately into cold water.

Drain the potatoes and pat them dry. Heat fat for deep frying in a skillet and when it is quite hot, add the potatoes to the fat and cook, stirring frequently, until the potatoes are quite crisp, 20 to 30 minutes. Drain well on obsorbent paper toweling. Set aside.

Cut the shallots into very thin slices and cook them in hot fat until nicely browned like fried onion rings. Drain well on absorbent paper toweling. Set aside.

Place the bean thread in a mixing bowl and pour boiling water over it. Let stand two minutes. Drain. Set aside.

Drop the bean sprouts into a pan of boiling water and let simmer about 30 seconds. Drain immediately. Set aside.

Place the cabbage in a bowl and pour boiling water over it. Let stand five minutes and drain. Set aside.

Cut the eggs as neatly as possible into quarter-inch slices.

Skin and bone the chickens. Shred the meat finely and arrange it in the centre of one or two large platters.

Arrange the garnishes around it in neat piles. Serve the sambal soto separately in a small bowl with lime wedges around it. Caution guests that the sambal is powerfully hot and optional. By all means use the lime wedges.

Serve the boiling hot soup in one or two hot tureens, letting guests help themselves. If desired, half of the garnishes except the sambal and the lime wedges may be added to the soup before serving.

Yield: 12 to 20 servings.

Note: In Indonesia fresh turmeric, a yellow root that resembles a small carot, is used in cookery. As far as is known fresh turmeric is not available in the United States, although powdered turmeric is commonplace. Lemon grass is also not available in American markets. Its flavor and taste is only vaguely reminiscent of lemon. Lemon grass may be omitted or a touch of grated lemon rind may be substituted without cooking. Both bean thread and bean sprouts are widely available in Chinese and other oriental markets.

Sambal Soto:

Remove the stems from 2 or 3 long hot mild red chilies or several small very hot red or green chilies, available in Oriental and Spanish markets. Chop the chilies until they are coarse-fine, seeds and all. Spoon into a serving dish. Use sparingly in other foods.

More Appealing Name For Cornstarch Pudding

PUDDING AND PIE FILLING

Makes 10 cups

In earlier times, these were known as cornstarch puddings. But that isn't a particularly appealing name.

3½ cups instant nonfat dry milk
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup cornstarch

Combine ingredients and store in tightly covered container in cool dry place.

To make vanilla-flavored pudding: Stir the basic mix thoroughly and measure out 1 cup. Gradually add 2 cups of cold water; bring mixture to boil, stirring, over low heat. Mixture is boiling when it bubbles and plops. Add 1 teaspoon butter or margarine and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Stir until butter melts, pour into serving dishes and refrigerate. Makes four ½-cup servings.

For chocolate pudding: Combine mix and water as directed above. Stir in either 1 ounce of unsweetened chocolate or 4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa and ½ teaspoon yanilla. Stir to mix well and pour into serving dishes. refrigerate until set.

Variations on the Cooked Spud

By HILDA BEASTALL

People with normally healthy appetites never become tired of potatoes so it seems scarcely necessary to glamorize this vegetable to make it appealing in family meals. Yet some mothers admit they seldom serve plain potatoes now because the family won't eat them. Could it be the Potato Chip fad has spoiled the appetites of its addicts?

Potatoes, the white kind, have been a source of low cost nourishment in the western world for at least 300 years. They contain valuable amounts of vitamins A and C, also some protein and measurable amounts of the B vitamins.

To retain all this goodness they need care in cooking as do all other vegetables. Scrubbed and baked whole, the potato is at its most nutritious and its most delicious flavor. Boiled in its skin is next best. If peeled it must be, use a swivel blade vegetable peeler and take off the thinnest skin possible, and keep the cooking water to use in another dish next day. It has the vitamins.

When baked in the skin for about an hour, a potato needs only splitting open and topping with margarine or butter to be perfect.

We don't always have a hot oven to bake potatoes for an hour economically, so we must use the next best way, boiled or steamed in their scrubbed skins. Large tubers should be cut lengthways so they cook more quickly. Put them into lightly salted boiling water, only just enough to barely cover, and boil gently until fork tender — about 20 minutes. You can eat the skins if you wish or slip them off with a knife and fork. Mash the potatoes to serve, or serve them in the pieces, but serve them hot not lukewarm.

Now for a few easy variations with potatoes.

HUNGARIAN POTATOES WITH PAPRIKA

6 medium potatoes
2 medium onions
¼ tsp. paprika
some hot water
1 cup sour cream or yogurt

Cook finely chopped onion in margarine until golden; add peeled and diced potatoes. Sprinkle with paprika and a little salt. Add tablespoon of hot water; cover and cook gently until potatoes are tender. Add a little more hot water if necessary to prevent sticking. Pour cream or yogurt over top, heat for 1 minute and serve.

Potato Chowder is almost a meal by itself; you add another vegetable or two as your fancy dictates.

POTATO CHOWDER

2 medium potatoes
1 small onion
½ cup diced celery with leaves
¼ cup diced green pepper
1½ cups water
1 cup chopped tomatoes
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. paprika
2 Tbsp. soft margarine
2 cups milke made with non instant skim powder.

Peel and dice potatoes; chop the onion. Put into saucepan with celery and green pepper. Add the water.

Cook gently for 15 minutes; add tomatoes, salt and paprika. Cook 5 minutes more. Test all vegetables to see if fork tender. Add margarine and milk; heat to boiling point, but do not boil. Serve hot.

Now for a real dilly for the garlic lovers. I have not yet made this, but came across the idea in a New England cookbook. For medium garlic users, cook 2 cloves of garlic with the potatoes, then discard if you wish though little flavor remains in the cloves after boiling with a bland food.

GARLIC POTATOES

8 medium potatoes
3 Tbsp. margarine
3 eggs, small
½ cup wheat germ
2 tsp. brewer's yeast
4 cloves garlic, crushed
3 Tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt
a grating of nutmeg

Peel potatoes thinly. Boil about 15 minutes until tender.

Drain, and keep liquid for future use. Mash or rice the potatoes. Beat in margarine and eggs. Add wheat germ, brewer's yeast, garlic cloves, parsley and seasoning. Spread in small glass dish; dot with a little more margarine. Put into 350 deg. oven for 15 minutes to brown a little.

Good with a green vegetable and liver and bacon browned in separate pan in same oven heat. A completely satisfying meal.

As a special lunch dish or a complete protein supper dish make a Golden Potato Ring. A 4-cup glass casserole will do if you have no small ring mould.

GOLDEN POTATO RING

4 or 5 medium potatoes
2 eggs, separated
1½ Tbsp. soy flour
3 Tbsp. grated cheddar cheese
a good pinch fresh or dried thyme
2 Tbsp. margarine
2 Tbsp wheat breadcrumbs and wheat germ

Thinly peel potatoes, cut small and boil in salted water until soft. There shouldn't be much water left; mash potatoes well, add soy flour, cheese, egg yolks and margarine. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into the mixture. If you left too much water, add another spoon of soy flour. Spoon into greased dish, sprinkle crumbs over.

Dot with small pieces of margarine. Bake at 375 deg. for 20 to 25 minutes, until lightly browned.

If in a ring mould, turn out on warm plate. Fill center with cooked green vegetable and decorate top with another vegetable.

This is really a fancy looking dish but essentially delicious and good with old fashioned potatoes for a base.

Easy-Fix Finger-Food For Holiday Entertaining

Pickle Stackwiches are the perfect answer to last minute Holiday entertaining. They're easy to prepare and a particularly good finger-food accompaniment for beverages. For special occasions garnish with extra cream cheese mixture piped into an attractive mound. For hurry up parties strips of pimiento or whole nuts will do just fine.

PICKLE STACKWICHES
(Makes 12 canapes)

4 slices thin-sliced white bread, toasted
1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1 tablespoon finely chopped pecans
2 teaspoons sweet pickle liquid, (drained from sweet fresh cucumber pickles)
Dash hot red pepper sauce
3 slices bologna, cut into quarters
12 sweet fresh cucumber pickles

Cut toast into 12 rounds using 1½ inch cookie cutter. Blend together cream cheese, pecans, pickle liquid and hot pepper sauce. Spread mixture on each toast round, about 2 teaspoons on each. Place on each round, 1 quarter of bologna, folded over; top with a pickle slice. If desired, garnish each canape with additional cream cheese.

For garnish, prepare recipe for cream cheese mixture as above. Using a pastry tube with star tip, pipe remaining cream cheese mixture on to each pickle slice. (Blend in more pickle liquid if mixture is too stiff.) Cover and refrigerate canapes until serving time.

CHEERY CHERRY PUNCH
(Makes about 5 cups)

1 jar (8 ounces) red maraschino cherries
2 cups cranberry juice cocktail.
6 tablespoons thawed undiluted frozen orange juice concentrate ½ cup cold water
1 can (12 ounces) ginger ale, chilled
Ice cubes

Pour cherries and cherry syrup into electric blender container. Blend until smooth; pour into pitcher (about 5-cup capacity). Stir in cranberry juice cocktail, orange juice concentrate and water. Chill.

Just before serving, stir in ginger ale and ice cubes.

Many Uses for Fritter Batter

The basic batter which is used for Apple Fritters, can be used to deepfry any of the following:

Fresh fruit such as bananas, cherries, strawberries, oranges, etc.

Vegetables such as carrots, zucchini, celery hearts, asparagus tips, etc.

Fish and seafood such as shrimp, scallops, haddock, etc.

When you saute foods in butter, a little oil added to the butter will prevent it from burning as quickly.

Add a tablespoon of oil to the boiling water in which you cook pasta in order to prevent sticking.

Applying a light coating of oil to the inside of a steel pan will prevent it from rusting. Clean carefully before using.

APPLE FRITTERS

BATTER:
1 cup all purpose flour;
¼ teaspoon salt;
2 tablespoons peanut oil;
1½ cups, less 3 tablespoons cold water;
2 egg whites;
apples;
oil, for deep drying, heated to a temperature of 350 degrees;

In a mixing bowl, combine the flour and the salt and then add the peanut oil and the cold water. Blend well.

Refrigerate the mixture, uncovered, for 30 minutes.

Beat the egg whites until very stiff. Remove the batter from the refrigerator. Gently but thoroughly fold the egg whites into the batter.

Core the apples with an apple corer before peeling them. Cut the apples across in slices of ⅛" thick.

Dip the apple slices, one at a time, into the batter and then drop them carefully into the hot oil.

Deepfry the apple fritters for 4 to 5 minutes, or until deep golden brown.

Drain the apple fritters on paper towels. Sprinkle with fine sugar.

Make Own Convenience Dishes

By MARIAN BURROS

WASHINGTON (WP) — The long, often unpronounceable, list of ingredients on packages of store-bought convenience products may convince all but the most daring shoppers that they could never reproduce them at home.

After all, who keeps butylated hydroxytoluene (BHT, a freshness preserver), Furcelleran (a thickening agent) or Sodium Benzoate (a preservative) in the kitchen cabinet?

But manufactured foods are based on simple recipes from cookbooks. These unpronounceable chemical additives do not improve the flavor, texture or appearance of "real" ingredients; but they do wonders for the cheap, artificial ingredients that so many of these processed foods contain.

They also add to the shelf life of the products.

If inexpensive ingredients are used then the food should be inexpensive; but it doesn't work out that way.

For the fact is, you can make all of these convenience dishes at home, without using a single chemical or inexpensive substitute and still save a considerable amount of money.

The mayonnaise recipe, admittedly quite different from the standard homemade versions, will keep indefinitely in the refrigerator. It costs $1.02 per quart, (so long as you don't throw out the egg whites but use them in another dish) compared to $1.79 a quart for the brand advertised as "whole egg mayonnaise."

A dry salad seasoning mix which flavors 1 cup of oil and vinegar dressing, costs 5½ cents when stirred up in your own kitchen. Its commercially prepared counterpart cost 24½ cents.

Pudding and pie filling mixes are nothing more than the old-fashioned cornstarch pudding.

Store the mixture in the cupboard and add your choice of flavorings when you want to make a filling. Two cups of home-prepared vanilla pudding cost 17 to 18 cents; 2 cups of chocolate flavor are 26 to 27 cents; 2 cups of coca flavor are 24 cents. Any flavor of a nationally advertised brand is 44 cents for the same two cups.

Homemade main dish rice and seasoning mix, to which a pound of hamburger is added, costs 35 to 40 cents, but the package on the supermarket shelf is 69 cents.

Cocoa mix, which contains both the sugar and the powdered milk, is 74 cents but costs 98 cents when you buy it at the store.

One of the best-known sandwich fillings, pimiento cheese spread, is $1.47 a pound made with natural cheddar cheese. The version available in a plastic container has water as its main ingredient and costs $1.60.

Another advantage to making your own convenience products at home is the opportunity to suit your own seasoning preferences. If you prefer your chocolate pudding mix or instant cocoa with less sugar, you are in a position to adjust the amount of sugar when you make it. If you don't think mayonnaise should contain sugar, you can leave it out.

It's also your option to use less salt in your salad dressing, or rice and hamburger oriental dish.

These choices are not open to you when you buy a product that is already prepared. You can add to it, but you can't take away.

INSTANT COCOA

(Makes 12 eight-ounce servings)

4 cups instant nonfat dry milk;
4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder;
4 tablespoons sugar, or more to taste;
⅛ teaspoon salt.

Combine ingredients and stir well. Store in tightly covered container in cool dry place. To make instant cocoa, combine 3½ tablespoons mix with 1 cup boiling hot water. For cold chocolate drink, combine with cold water and serve over ice.

SALAD DRESSING MIX

(Enough for 8 cups liquid)

4 teaspoons salt;
1 teaspoon dried minced garlic;
4 teaspoons instant minced onion;
1 teaspoon black pepper;
1 teaspoon sugar;
1 teaspoon paprika.

Combine ingredients and store, tightly covered, in cool dry place.

To use, combine 2 tablespoons water with ¼ cup vinegar. Stir in 1½ teaspoons seasoning mix and then 2-3 cup salad oil. Beat well or shake in tightly covered bottle. Makes 1 cup salad dressing.

ETERNAL MAYONNAISE

(Makes 2 cups)

For this recipe, a base is made. It keeps indefinitely in the refrigerator. It is thinned with cream as needed.

½ cup vinegar;
8 egg yolks;
½ cup butter;
½ cup light cream.

Bring vinegar just to boil. Beat yolks well. Pour a little hot vinegar into yolks, beating constantly with a whisk or fork. Return yolk mixture to vinegar in pan. Cook and stir over low heat until mixture thickens. Remove from heat and stir in butter, mixing until butter is melted. Place mixture in tightly covered container and refrigerate.

For one cup of mayonnaise, combine half of the base mixture with ¼ cup cream. For 2 cups of mayonnaise, combine with ½ cup cream.

Embark on Taste Adventure With Fresh Canadian Lamb

Lamb lovers can whet their appetites — their season is here. Those who have never eaten lamb can embark on a taste adventure for this is the time of the year when fresh Canadian lamb is most abundant and most reasonably priced. Lamb is available all year around but in the fall months Canadian spring lambs are mature for marketing.

Choosing a good quality meat will assure you of a succulent product. The Canada inspection stamp shows that the carcass has been federally health inspected. A newly implemented national grading system indicates the quality and fat content. All graded carcasses are branded with a color-coded ribbon brand. The top grade, Canada A (red), is subdivided into four categories, Canada A1 to Canada A4, according to the amount of fat covering. A1 has the least fat while A4 has the most. The Canada B (blue) and Canada C (brown) grades have less fat covering than is normally considered desirable. The Canada D grade (black), which applies only to meat of animals over 14 months of age, is also subdivided into four levels to indicate quality. The E (black) grade is for mature males.

You may consider lamb a special occasion meat, as do many other Canadians. Why not let lamb liven up everyday meals? Complement its delicate flavour with herbs and spices such as marjoram, rosemary, thyme, mint, ginger, garlic, oregano, or curry powder. Sprinkle on the meat before cooking or add to the gravy or sauce. Lamb provides protein, iron and B vitamins — all essential to good health.

BROILED LAMB SHISH KABOBS

Marinade:

1½ cups oil
1 cup vinegar
1 cup catsup
1 cup chili sauce
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, crushed
3 tablespoons sugar

Combine all ingredients.

Kabobs:

2 pounds boneless lamb, cut in 1-inch cubes
12 canned whole potatoes
12 large fresh mushrooms
12 cherry tomatoes
1 large green pepper, cut in 12 1-inch pieces
¼ cup brandy (optional)
4 cups hot cooked rice

Add meat and vegetables to marinade. Let stand 2 to 3 hours at room temperature or refrigerate overnight. Arrange meat and vegetables on separate skewers. Broil 2 inches from heat until vegetables are tender-crisp (2 minutes each side) and meat is desired degree of doneness (4 minutes each side for well done; 3 minutes each side for medium). If desired, kabobs can be flamed by igniting warmed brandy, and pouring over kabobs. Serve on rice. 6 servings.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Thursday

Nov. 21

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Completion of project is featured. You also get wish in connection with "influence." You gain friends, get special assignment and get chance to display special talent, ability. Libra is likely to be in picture. Be receptive to signed agreement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who knows where "bodies are buried" trusts you with new project, procedure. You will be able to utilize creative abilities. Leo, Aquarius persons are likely to be in picture. Concentrate on prestige and image. Don't be thrown off track by jealous associate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with looking — and seeing — beyond supposed limitations. Your intuition is sharp; you perceive beyond use of ordinary senses. Teaching, learning processes are highlighted. Someone around you is juggling figures. Insist on accounting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message for valid hint. Check money affairs. Appraisal is in order. Be positive about tax, insurance matters. One close to you may be at financial cross-purposes. Frank discussion is in order.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be aware of details, fine points, subtle nuances. Those who hold opposing views could attempt to place roadblocks in path of your progress. A contract could be offered — which contains trick clause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could have minor dispute with persons who perform basic services, tasks. Maintain equilibrium. Do some checking — find reasons, motives. Keep health, diet resolutions. Refuse to break rules on mere whim.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Purchase of luxury item could be considered. Budget also is in picture. Taurus, Libra persons may be involved. Your sense of beauty, design are called into play. Remain within bounds of good taste. Avoid needless extravagance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Older individual, impatient with other viewpoints, could be cantankerous. Be aware of what is written between the lines. Perfect techniques. Eliminate procedures which cause delays. Pisces person could aid in achieving goal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis is on responsibility for ideas, special projects which involve close neighbors and relatives. Persons who talk about investments, capital gains and the like come into focus. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get action in money area. Issue that had been "left hanging" will be resolved. You collect and pay. You get accounts in order. Take "cold plunge" into future. Refuse to be bogged down with concepts mired in past. You do have right to live your own life!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Strive to strike chord of originality. Don't imitate. Imprint your own style. Be aware and conspicuous. Be willing to take a chance on your own ideas, theories and beliefs. Another Aquarian — and a Leo — figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Undercover, clandestine — those could be keywords. Means tone is subdued. Closed-door meeting has much to do with your future. Key is to co-operate without abandoning principles. Aquarius, Cancer persons figure in important ways. Work quietly — improve efficiency rating.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have great sense of humor, are weight-conscious, ambitious, artistic, creative, intense; fond of travel, could succeed in areas of communication, including publishing. September was your most significant month of 1974. You now have more responsibility, are under pressure but you land on your feet and your views are vindicated. Sagittarius, Gemini persons play important roles in your life.

dear abby

Stricken, But Able

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that a guy named Walter, age 52, had a heart attack, and he got well enough to play tennis three times a week, but not well enough to make love to his old lady.

I am 56, have had two heart attacks, and I make love to three different dames three nights a week.

Tennis I'll leave to Walter. Sign me — Greedy.

DEAR GREEDY: Too many peaches could give you more than a heart attack.

DEAR ABBY: How do you forget a guy? He and I had a great relationship for two months, then his old girl friend started calling him and he started seeing her again, and that's when I lost him.

He said he thought he could care for me, and I know he meant it. I fell in love with him the first night we were alone together.

When the other girl was out of the picture, things were perfect between us, but when she came back, I gradually saw him less and less. Finally I couldn't stand it any longer and told him we had to talk openly and freely. He said he cared for the other girl a lot, but he cared for me, too. He even admitted that he didn't know why he cared for the other girl because she treated him like dirt, and I treated him good.

Abby, is this what I get for being nice? I told him I couldn't handle a part-time relationship, and he said he'd think it over.

I haven't heard from him since. I am miserable and depressed. Should I call him and ask if there is still hope for us? I am 22 and he is 21. The other girl is 19. Please help me. — Miserable.

DEAR MISERABLE: You caught him temporarily — on the rebound — but the moment his old girl friend whistled, he came running, which proves his feeling for her was only dormant, not dead.

It's strange how some people prefer those who treat them like "dirt." (They practically ask for abuse because unconsciously they don't have a very high opinion of themselves, and feel they deserve it.)

I know it's not easy to "forget" a guy you think you love, but if you concentrate on other things, instead of dwelling on him, you can do it. Start today!

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for the mother who was so "depressed" because her baby had such a large nose.

Our first baby was a beautiful little girl. There was only one problem. She was born with "spina bifida" — an open spine.

Our baby is only four months old and she has had, to date, surgery five times.

Abby, instead of this mother looking at her baby and crying because of her large nose, she should be crying for joy and thanking God for having blessed her with a healthy baby. She doesn't know how lucky she is. Don and Joan.

Resource Ministers Meet

Provinces are expected to strengthen their claims to natural resources during a ministers' conference on resource ownership opening today at Heritage Court.

This is the pre-conference view of B.C. Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Bob Williams, who welcomed delegates from the provinces and federal representatives to the 17th plenary session of the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers at a luncheon today at the Empress Hotel.

"I think we will see a strengthening of the province's positions — and probably see some of the provinces which don't normally question federal ownership doing so," Williams said.

He said the "whole broad question of ownership, meanings for confederation as I see it" would be dealt with.

The meetings, which are the first in a long time in Victoria for environment and resource ministers, are especially important because provincial ownership of resources is one of the main functions, Williams said.

A highlight of the conference will be Thursday afternoon when Alberta attorney-general and provincial secretary C. M. Leitch will discuss constitutional analysis of resource ownership.

Federal Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve reports tonight on the World Population Conference, following a paper by Quebec Minister of Lands and Forest Kevin Drummond, on offshore mineral resources.

The Law of the Sea Conference will be discussed by Paul Lapointe, law of the sea co-ordinator for the external affairs department.

Eric Kierans, economics professor at McGill University and former federal communications minister, will speak on royalty taxation relationships in Canada Thursday afternoon.

This part of the program is expected to focus much attention in view of the new federal budget, proposing a major shift in policy for oil industry taxation.

John Ciaccia, special adviser on native rights to the Quebec premier, will speak on land and mineral rights of natives in the first part of the final afternoon.

GOV'T FUNDING 'BIASED' ADS

The British Columbia government is spending between $150,000 and $200,000 on "completely biased" full-page newspaper advertisements of the Prospectors Assistance Program, Gordon Gibson (L-North Vancouver-Capilano) charged Tuesday.

Gibson asked Mines Minister Leo Nimsick under what legislative authority he was spending the advertising money.

The minister replied the department, "I hope," has funds for advertising.

Gibson said the advertisement contained a number of one-sided statements and suggested the department of mines and petroleum resources supply funds for the opposition parties to publicly refute the statements.

James Chabot (SC-Columbia River) estimated the cost of placing the advertisment in the two Vancouver daily papers and the two Victoria dailies at $10,000.

He asked Nimsick if the ad would also be carried by B.C. weekly newspapers and the minister replied it would.

The 1974 Editor and Publisher Yearbook says there are 19 dailies and 109 weeklies in the province.

Rail Audit Charge False—Strachan

An opposition charge that B.C. Railway auditors resigned rather than cover up financial bungling was labelled a "complete falsehood" Tuesday by Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Referring to a 1973 report of B.C. comptroller-general J. W. Minty, Strachan said the report "makes it obvious there was interference by the previous administration" in the auditing procedure followed by the firm of Buttar and Chiene, chartered accountants who have handled Pacific Great Eastern (now BCR) accounts since 1916.

Strachan assumed the reason the auditors had resigned was because the Minty report had been critical of their internal auditing which the report suggested was minimal.

He also said the allegation by Opposition Leader Bill Bennett, on Monday, was probably designed to detract attention from a court case arising from the "mismanagement of the previous administration."

The case referred to involves a suit by Mel Paving Ltd., Red Deer, Alta., against BCR and its general manager for gross and deliberate understatement of the work to be done on a $21.9 million contract to clear and grade 49 miles of the Takla-Dease Lake railway extension. The company quit early last month with 10 miles incompleted.

Strachan said the auditor's letter of resignation was questioned by the government and elicited the reply, "for personal reasons."

The minister produced an excerpt from Minty's report, which said that according to the BCR comptroller, former PGE vice-president and director Einar M. Gunderson "restricted the extent to which the external auditors could go into their auditing with a consequent limitation of fees charged."

The fee charged by Buttar and Chiene for 1972 amounted to $4,100, the Minty report noted.

It also stated:

—For 10 years the auditors had not reported on internal control deficiencies in BCR.

—Auditors indicated satisfaction with year-end cut-off procedures, even though at least one major area — inventories — was not accurate and at Dec. 31, 1972 warranted qualification in the auditor's report.

—The absence of three notes referred to in a previous part of Minty's report should have led the external auditors to comment on financial statements.

—Auditors failed to obtain from BCR a certificate covering inventories, payables, commitments, contingencies, etc.

—Although the auditors attended physical inventory counts at North Vancouver and Squamish railway operations, they considered all other external, on-site auditing to be an internal audit function, and stated the company's level of internal auditing over the past three years had been "minimal and of little or no value to them."

B.C. Ignores Housing Plea Indians Say

Southern Vancouver Island Tribal Federation president Tom Sampson has berated the provincial government for failing to help Indians obtain housing.

He sai dthe provincial government has neglected to reply to a telegram from the federation asking for a meeting to discuss housing.

The federation represents the 19 tribes in southern Vancouver Island.

At a group meeting Sunday Sampson was re-elected president, Harry Dick vice-president, Ray Harris first vice-president, Wilson Bob second vice-president.

Treasurer is Gus Underwood and secretary Elizabeth Modest.

Chiefs to Meet Monthly

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

As criminal activity in the province has mushroomed, so have criminal justice forces combatting it.

Just one example of the move to foster greater collective action has been the formalizing of the Association of B.C. Police Chiefs, which up to this fall existed only as a loose-knit non-structured body.

Formed last month in North Vancouver, complete with constitution and an executive board, the group will hold its first business meeting in Victoria Thursday and Friday.

Host for the session is the association's first president, Saanich police chief Bob Peterson.

He has arranged a full agenda with speakers from the Insurance Corporation of B.C., the police commission, the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU), and the sheriff's service.

The group will also hear from two task forces, one working on a new witness management program for the courts, the other developing pre-trial services for the corrections branch.

Most sessions will be closed to the public.

Peterson sees the meeting as the outcome of a growing need among the chiefs to assimilate rapid changes in criminal justice.

"We have found we need a dialogue . . . and on a more regular basis," he said.

The key word is continuity. "We never had that before. We used to meet four times a year . . . and I don't think we accomplished a great deal."

Now they have started to meet once a month, or more if the occasion warrants.

"We are anxious to have some input into the many programs the government is initiating. But without a formal agency, that wouldn't be possible."

On Oct. 18, a constitution was approved and Peterson elected president. Other officers include North Vancouver RCMP Insp. Norm Fuchs, secretary, Burnaby RCMP Superintendent W. G. Lambert, vice-president, and Central Saanich Chief Bob Miles, the lone director on the executive board.

Chiefs of all 12 municipal police forces in the province are members as are the two senior RCMP officers, (assistant commissioner Ed Willes and chief superintendent Mark Marcus), and commissioned officers-in-charge of municipal RCMP detachments (rank of sub-inspector up).

Associate memberships are offered to the three commissioners and two executive assistants on the B.C. Police Commission, and the chief officers of related enforcement agencies such as the National Harbors Board, Customs, and Immigration.

The aims of the association have been adopted on the lines of the national body — the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs (of which Victoria's chief constable Jack Gregory is president).

"We have the same scope, the same objectives," Peterson said.

Those goals include creating higher police standards, enhancing professional status, developing criminal investigation tools and instilling uniform police practices.

"Law enforcement has been forgotten in the province for a number of years," said Peterson. "Too little money has been spent, not enough dynamic programs started.

"Now everything is blossoming forth."

CERTIFICATION UPHELD

The B.C. Labor Relations Board has upheld its certification of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union at the F. W. Woolworth store in Duncan.

The decision, issued by board vice-chairman Jack Moore, covered both a company request for reconsideration of the certification and a bid by a Woolworth employee for a representation vote.

In his written report, Moore stated that "many" of the 44 signatures on a petition submitted by employee Norman Sousa through lawyer D. A. Farquhar were not members of the bargaining unit and "most" were not members of the union.

Moore also noted that while the company had requested reconsideration of the certification, it declined to participate in a recent hearing on the request — stating an appearance would prejudice a court action it had launched.

On Sousa's bid, Moore said there was no evidence to alter the board's earlier finding that a majority of the employees were members of the union at the time the board received the certification application.

Certification was varied, however, to exclude office staff because in the retail sales industry the standard bargaining unit excludes these persons.

Discrimination Problem: Most Disinterested—Ruff

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

Violation of human rights will not be stopped while governments, universities, landlords and employers act on the myth that people are treated equally, the chairman of the B.C. Human Rights Commission told a college audience Tuesday.

"People are not treated equally," said Kathleen Ruff, speaking at Camosun College during a lunch-hour meeting.

Those who discriminate pretend they are not doing so by clothing the issue in well-worn statements about equality, she said.

"The great problem in the area of discrimination is that most people are disinterested. They close their eyes to it and wash their hands of it," she said.

In doing so, they pretend to be acting upon what they say they believe, she said.

But employers and groups with decision-making power should take "affirmative action" toward provision of equal opportunity, said Ruff.

"They should go out of their way to hire members of minority and disadvantaged groups, then monitor that hiring policy," she said.

Only if people open their eyes to the situation and begin to record their progress in battling discrimination will more than token steps be taken, said Ruff.

Although her department is administering the new Human Rights Code and acting on individual cases where the code is broken, Ruff said that more must be done.

"If all we do is tackle those few blatant cases of discrimination it's more just a sop to the conscience of citizens."

Companies should keep records of their hiring policies and details of those hired so discrimination can really be checked, she said.

"They know their records on other matters," she said, adding that many of these matters were far less important than human rights.

One person in the audience asked Ruff why employers shouldn't be able to choose employees without human rights restrictions.

"The germs of discrimination are just as destructive as are germs to physical health," she said, noting that few people would object to health regulations employers must adhere to.

Four Argentine Guerrillas Slain

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Four guerrillas were killed today after they failed in an attempt to ambush police patrolmen in Cordoba, police sources said.

The guerrillas, three men and a woman, fired with machineguns at the patrolmen from a passing car.

Juveniles Linked To 11 Break-Ins

Esquimalt police have caught four juveniles they believe responsible for 11 break-ins in the municipality over the past three weeks.

The boys ranged in age from 12 to 16, and are expected to apear in juvenile court next week.

Sgt. Doug Sproxton said "well over $1,000" in money and liquor was taken from nine private homes, one doctor's office and one restaurant, in break-ins dating back to Oct. 28.

Sproxton alleged the youths, working in groups of two or three, entered most of the homes by forcing open sliding aluminum glass windows. In one residence, entry was gained through an unlocked door.

No damage was apparently done and the thieves in each case were only after money, cigarettes and liquor, he said.

The juveniles remain in custody of their parents until their court appearance, Sproxton said.

Company Tune: Stay in Sask.

REGINA (CP) — International Minerals and Chemical Corp. Ltd. has started a province-wide campaign to encourage young people to stay in Saskatchewan.

The postash company is promoting a record it has commissioned telling young people "now that you know where you're going, did you know you can get there right here?"

The record, and a booklet giving success stories of persons who stayed in Saskatchewan, will be sent free to anyone filling in a coupon that is to appear in coming newspaper advertisements. At least one radio station has included the record, sung by Sue Bowering, on its playlist.

Tripled Chip Prices Aid Sawmills

Study Claims Mills Can Pay Higher Prices

Future investment in the B.C. pulp industry will be encouraged only with reasonalle average long-term returns, declare a report filed in the legislature Tuesday by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

He produced a three-volume study by two members of B.C. Research titled: A Basis for Determining the Values of Wood Chips to be Used in Appraisals for the Calculation of Stumpage Revenue in B.C.

It supported his statement in the house that pulp mills can afford to pay more for wood chips — up to $60 a bone-dry unit compared with current prices in the range of $16-$24.

Debate in the legislature all day Tuesday was on the principle of the Timber Products Stabilization Act, which refers specifically to wood chips, and empowers the government to set up a price regulating board.

The study was conducted between Sept. 2 and Oct. 25, 1974, to update work done in 1973. It noted sharp increases in both product prices and operating costs of the pulp industry, for example:

—20 per cent before-tax rate of return on equity was raised to 25 per cent.

—Interest rates were increased to the range on 8-12 per cent to 8-10 per cent.

"Ability of mills to pay (more for chips) has increased to a much greater degree," the report said, estimating that "taking a fairly conservative evaluation, most mills can afford to pay $60 per bone dry unit (f.o.b. pulp mills) in the immediate short term."

Some coast mills had already paid in that range, although in the interior prices are generally less — in the $40 range, it said.

Many interior mills in recent times had suffered extensive losses, partly due to low pulp prices in the latter 1960s, and the current spell of prosperity will likely recoup these losses if it continues a year or two, the report said.

But the "memory of losses in B.C." will haunt board rooms, and it is suggested B.C. Forest Service and the provincial government keep recent poor financial performance in mind when determing chip values for appraising stumpage revenue, the report advises.

Investment will be encouraged only if average return over long term is reasonable, it is suggested, and the government might indicate willingness to consider past losses as a mitigating factor in setting chip values for the first few years.

This could be conditional on firms supplying evidence of and reasons for such losses.

There are two longer range considerations if the forest service should consider action to raise prices, the report said:

The mechanism to raise chip prices must respond to both changes in product prices and operating costs to ensure ability of mills to pay.

Increased chip prices could adversely affect ability of mills to recover past losses and improve long-term average return on investment, thus hindering future investment in the industry.

Pulp mills in the province could be forced to pay as much as three times the going rate for wood chips under new legislation which was debated through afternoon and evening sittings of the house Tuesday.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said a "conservative evaluation" of the pulp mills' ability to pay has been set at $60 a bone dry unit, compared to current rates which range from $10 to $26 a b.d.u.

"A somewhat lessened price could easily be afforded by the least profitable pulp mill in B.C.," said Williams.

The minister said he had hoped there would have been a quick response from the pulp industry to the current slump hitting independent sawmillers in B.C., "but there was only marginal response."

Williams backed up the $60 suggested price by filing in the house a three-volume report by B.C. Research on stumpage appraisal and wood chip pricing.

"There's a huge gap between their ability to pay and what is being paid. Only some pulp mills agreed to higher prices for low utility grade lumber and in this situation . . . no government could idly stand by while the pulp mills have never been fatter.

"They offered too little too late. A floor price has to be established. We're determined to see the independent sawmill get a better price."

The Timber Products Stabilization Act gives the cabinet the power to regulate chip prices and establishes a forest products board to recommend prices.

Williams said the $60 price would allow 20 per cent return on capital before taxes for pulp mills.

The price was recommended by a team from the B.C. Research Institute after a study of acceptable prices throughout last year.

Williams blamed the previous government for the "quasi-monopoly advantages of the pulp industry which, he said, placed the independent sector in jeopardy. He quoted figures which indicated the total number of sawmills in the 1950s was more than 2,000 compared to 1973's 810.

For one ton of bleached kraft pulp mills were getting $133 in 1956 compared to current $340 per ton rate.

Opposition Leader Bill Bennett lashed out at Williams for pointing the finger at the previous Socred government when "unemployment in the industry was something we talked about all summer, yet you refused to do anything about it.

"We're the people that first expressed concern yet this minister acts in the 11th hour in the 11th month."

"The charges against this party are unrealistic and an obvious snow-job to keep from discussing the bill," which Bennett said allows takeover of the forest industry through the back door.

One clause might deal with chips but what about the other nine pages of sweeping dictatorial legislation, asked Bennett.

The opposition leader said the "traditional form of forest service could have taken initiative in negotiating higher chip prices without the heavy-handedness this government uses because of its insecurity."

William's explanation of the bill was "the biggest political line attached to a bill I've ever seen," said Bennett. "It's a decietful act that has no relation to problem-solving."

Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson said the legislation allows the government to "put a squeeze on any company to the point where it has to accept sale or bankruptcy. This technique is not unknown to government."

The member for North Vancouver-Capilano described the timber products legislation as "the biggest bill of the session", and "how the minister can show such solicitude for what he calls the indigenous industries when he wants to take over the forest industry . . . well it just makes me sick."

Gibson criticized the board's right to enter the log market on the lower coast.

"We all agree companies should pay more money for chips, but this bill is a smokescreen which provides jobs for the boys (backbenchers) and allows for take-over of the forest industry."

One section provides that membership of the new forest board can include MLAs. The bill also gives the board corporation status able to hire employees, acquire shares and other securities of a company and borrow finances from provincial revenue.

Gibson agreed the lumber industry has to be stabilized but suggested scrapping the legislation in favor of an appraisal system to reform and cover real costs in the industry; relaxation of logging guidlines "necessary in tough times"; implementing major rehabilitation and reforestation and increasing the government's road building program.

Gibson said a public corporation in forest products would be excused from disclosure although private companies are required to make such disclosure according to the companies legislation.

He alleged the minister himself could control the British Columbia Forest Products Board, which would have a minimum of three members and two for a quorum.

"The bill almost defies belief,' 'Gibson said. "It is the bill of a minister who wants to destroy a system, of a minister who wants to make himself stand taller by tearing others down."

NDP CHIP BILL CANCELS MILL

Resources Minister Bob Williams was unconcerned Tuesday after a proposed $140 million pulp mill expansion at Quesnel was cancelled because of the government's new wood chip legislation.

Williams said the forest resources in the Cariboo will "be put to use one way or another" regardlesss of cancellation of Cariboo Pulp and Paper's planned bleached kraft pulp expansion.

Opposition Leader Bill Bennett raised the company's decision during debate of the government's new chip price legislation.

Bennett charged the decision was made because of the new Timber Products Stabilization Act; "because the act destroys confidence in the government.

"It's no wonder there's been a lessening of expansion in the pulp industry," said Bennett. "You can have the best of intentions, but if you can't understand the fragility of the economic base (in the forest industry) you'll destroy the economy."

"The province is losing projects and you're scoffing," said Bennett.

A press statement from Bennett's office quotes Gary Bowell, president of Weldwood of Canada, which jointly owns Cariboo Pulp with Daishowa-Marubeni International Ltd.:

"This act destroys our confidence in the agreements with the B.C. government," said Bowell.

"Any pulp expansion must be based on a secure supply of raw material at economic costs. A company must be able to predict the trend of the cost of raw material over at least 20 years."

Although the company had "contemplated signing long-term contracts with individual sawmillers in the Cariboo region . . . the act clearly states that the pricing clauses of such contracts would be null and void."

Bowell said, both Premier Barrett and Williams "do not seem to be interested in future employment and in upgrading the value of forest resources."

Asked for comments outside the house, Williams said he is aware of a variety of companies interested in establishing facilities in the area, "and I'm satisfied the raw materials will be put to use.

"The resource material in the area could be used for a wide range of purposes."

8 CARDS OF THANKS

On behalf of Mr. Robert F. Ely, now departed, I wish to express my gratitude and appreciation to the Reverend Tony Roberts, D.V.A doctors, staff and volunteer workers, Army, Navy, Air Force Club, Ladies Auxiliary.
LAST BUT BY NO MEANS LEAST
Mr. G. Bond, Mr. H. Neilson, for countless months and years of comradeship and devotion which enabled him to live a full and rich life until the end. And also for a dignified-secret service at his departure. — His pal, Mr. Charles O'Toole.

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for the sympathy extended to us in the recent bereavement of our late father, Thomas George Tuxford. Also for the kindness shown him while a patient in the Victoria General Hospital, from the nurses on the Ward and Dr. G. Reilly and Dr. W. E. Martin. — The Tuxford Family.

Mr. Reginald Earle Smith wishes to express sincere thanks to the host of friends for their many acts of kindness and sympathy shown at the passing of my dear wife, Annie Smith. A special thanks to Dr. Jack Anderson and Hospital; Rev. Dr. King and the Rev. Ray Brandon.

9 IN MEMORIAM

PATTERSON — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, "Clement R. Patterson," who passed away November 19th, 1968. Deeply missed by Mary and family, Waysie, Jim and Evelyn, Tom and Dorothy.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

Sea Winds Can Be Baffled

Gardens near salt water are exposed to varying degrees of wind from the ocean. In fact, no two gardens are likely to be affected in the same way since the coastline around the southern end of Vancouver Island has a thousand aspects.

The gardens of Dallas Road near Ross Bay have different exposure to those further along and around the point to Beach Drive. Quite different again are gardens near the water at Brentwood and those nearby at Deep Cove. Victoria's Beacon Hill Park and Esquimalt's Saxe Point Park have little in common except that both are perched above lashing coastal waves. But their climate is really not similar.

All these places show plenty of color at every season, achieved not only by careful selection of suitable plants but by the use of screening plant material in some instances as a baffle against the prevailing wind of the area.

For a garden near salt water one needs to live with the property for a year at least making extensive notes of wind direction with dates of most severe and prolonged windy spells.

Also notes of salt spray deposit, and where. The windows on the four sides of the house should be listed and salt deposit noted, also whether it reaches a car parked at certain points on a driveway. The results of these observations will indicate where salt-susceptible plants may or may not be located.

Not usually known by gardeners new to salt water is the fact that a salty deposit is harmful to many broadleaved evergreen shrubs because it withdraws moisture from the leaf tissues — salt taking up moisture. Thus brown patches develop on laurel and others.

The native coniferous evergreens, and some not native, are immune to wind and to salt deposit, making these suitable for screening of gardens near the ocean.

Yet at Ross Bay we see an example of constant salty wind damage of every defence planted along the coastline boundary. It is admittedly one of the most exposed of all spots in the city area, only the tough fibered gorse seems able to stand up to the elements.

Tamarix is a good companion when gorse must be used as a garden boundary, for its whippy branches clothed with tiny leaves in summer relieve the starkness of the dark gorse. And the cloudy masses of pink flowers go well with the yellow gorse.

Make notes of plants you see thriving along the edge of parks near the water. You notice many have grey leaves. The "grey" color is the result of fine silky hairs having the ability to resist salt spray and usually wind damage. Rosemary's botanical name is Rosmarinus meaning spray of the sea.

Senecios, Artemisias and Santolinas all have grey foliage making them suitable and attractive for gardens near the sea. Plants with very fine foliage are also immune to wind and saltspray. Among them tamarix, heathers, and the many cultivated forms and colors of the Broom family. For trees you have a good choice among the pines, always thought of in connection with wild salty coastlines.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION PLEASE CALL L. THOMAS AT DOUGLAS HAWKES LTD., 990 BLANSHARD ST., 384-7128 (RESIDENCE 43-1729).

We are offering several very well secured 1st mortgage investments with yields from 15-16% and with repayment terms to suit investors. Available in amounts from $20,000-$7000. If you have less money available for investment, we can arrange a joint mortgage investment for you. We highly recommend that you avail yourself of these investments at this time, as a downwaid trend in yields is now forecast. Our investors have a trouble-free collection record and perhaps you would be wise to join this profitable group. We carefully select and credit check all mortgage applications and offer the investing public nothing that we would not be prepared to take ourselves. Please phone 385-9765 and ask for ERIC CHARMAN of CHARMAN PACIFIC REALTY LTD.
P.S. We are usually in a position to offer equally attractive 1st mortgage investments at current interest rates.

PERHAPS YOU WOULD LIKE TO OBTAIN THE HIGH YIELDS NOW OFFERED TO MORTGAGE INVESTORS — but you're not quite sure where to turn for sound advice.
We have the experience, the qualified mortgage executives and we are constantly in touch with the market demands.
WE SOLICIT YOUR ENQUIRIES WITHOUT OBLIGATION.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily Monday through Saturday, call:

16-Year-Olds Held In Shooting Threat

CALGARY (CP) — Two 16-year-olds have been charged with attempted murder after an alleged attempt to collect a 30-dollar debt with a pistol.

Police said today the pair asked David Gardippie, 17, of Calgary, to go for a ride Friday in a half-ton truck. He was driven to Fish Creek provincial park where the truck was stopped near the river, and one of the youths pushed a pistol in his ribs.

Police said he was told if he did not get the money soon he would have his head blown off.

One of the youths began shooting the pistol to either side of Gardippie from a distance of several feet. After about seven shots were fired, the victim was driven home to get the money.

Once inside, he told his mother about the incident and police were called.

Gary Grant Ivie of Calgary and Roger Stewart Reeder of Okotoks, Alta., are to appear in provincial court Monday charged with attempted murder and possession of an offensive weapon.

Instant Driver Data Soon for B.C. Forces

Instant retrieval of motor vehicle information will be possible for B.C. police forces within a few weeks as computerization of Motor Vehicle Branch records nears completion.

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said the Insurance Corporation of B.C. computer technically will be in a position to supply registration and insurance information in two or three weeks.

But the actual linking of computer with police forces has not been ironed out, said an ICBC spokesman today.

Strachan suggested this would be done by means of a visual readout terminal operated at the push of a button in some police locations. Information would flash on a small TV screen through an electronic connection with the computer bank, he said.

Such a system would be the first of its kind in this country. At present it involves the transfer of 1.5 million automobile registrations to the computer's memory bank.

Hussein Death Vow

BEIRUT (UPI) — A top Arab guerilla leader has vowed to assassinate King Hussein despite the apparent reconciliation of Jordan and the Palestinian commando movement.

Salah Khalaf, who uses the code name Abu Iyad, said the leadership of the Al Fatah guerrilla movement has decided to kill Hussein and overthrow his regime.

$10M Ransom

BRESCIA, Italy (UPI) — Kidnappers released the son of one of Italy's richest men early today for what sources close to the investigation said may have been a record ransom of more than $10 million.

DRILL RIGS U.S.-BOUND

CALGARY (CP) — Eight more drilling rigs have left Canada for the United States earlier this month, increasing the number of rigs which moved south of the border this year to 40, the Daily Oil Bulletin reports.

Thomson Drilling has shipped its five remaining rigs to the U.S. and is terminating its Canadian operations. AMC Drilling, Commonwealth Drilling and Shelby Drilling have each moved one rig to the U.S.

Between January and October, 32 drilling rigs left for the U.S.

Dief Signs to Tell All

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker is wasting no time getting down to business on his memoirs, which, he said Tuesday as he signed a publisher's contract, will be "of tremendous interest" to Canadians.

The former Progressive Conservative prime minister signed the seven-page contract (left) for two, possibly three volumes — to be published by The Macmillan Co. of Canada — in his memento-studded office on Parliament Hill.

It also was signed by Macmillan president George W. Gilmour, Hugh Kane, vice-chairman of the company's board, and Dr. John Archer, the president of the University of Regina who will be general editor of the memoirs.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he plans to leave today with his wife Olive for a three-to-four week stay in Barbados, where he will work on the books.

"I want my wife to have a break and during that time I'm going to work. . . ."

He said he already has finished about 500 pages and the completed work will contain "a large number of matters that will be of tremendous interest, I'm sure."

The first volume, which Mr. Kane expects to publish on Mr. Diefenbaker's 80th birthday — Sept. 18, 1975 — will cover the years up to 1957, when he became prime minister. It will cover the veteran politician's years as a lawyer, and his time in the Saskatchewan legislature and in the Commons.

Volume Two will cover his year's as prime minister until the leadership convention of 1967 when he was succeeded by the present Conservative leader, Robert Stanfield.

Although no details on the anticipated third volume were available, it is expected it will cover the intervening years.

SOVIET SPY RING CLAIMED SMASHED

PARIS (Reuter) — French counter - espionage recently smashed a Soviet spy network seeking nuclear secrets, the news magazine Le Point says.

The network, belonging to a Red Army intelligence unit identified as GRU was broken during September and October, the magazine says.

The network tried to gather information on France's nuclear strike force and on the results of French nuclear tests in the Pacific, Le Point says.

Interior Minister Michel Ponatiwowski said last month that two major spy networks from rival powers were uncovered recently in France. He declined to give further details.

Le Point gives no source for the report, carried in a column which is usually well-informed on security matters.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the Spingold Knockout Team-of-Four Championships held a few years ago, each of the two South declarers in today's deal arrived at the identical contract of four spades, doubled by East. The success or failure of the contract depanded on the play of the trump suit. One declarer made the winning decision; the other the losing one.

East-West vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♥	1 ♠	2 ♥	3 ♠
4 ♥	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

When the deal was played the first time, South won the opening lead with his ace of hearts, and at trick two led a low spade. When West followed suit with the five, dummy's six was inserted. East captured this trick with the ten.

East now saved declarer the trouble of guessing the club set-up by cashing the ace of clubs at trick three (declarer had no way of getting to dummy to lead a club towards his own hand). To trick four East returned a heart, hoping to get his partner into the lead. Declarer ruffed this heart lead.

He next led another low trump, West's queen being covered by dummy's king, which was taken by East's ace. A heart continuation was ruffed by declarer, who next played the jack of trumps, picking up East's last trump. When the king of clubs felled West's queen, declarer had the rest of the tricks. His only losers were two trumps and a club.

When the deal was replayed, West again opened a heart, which was won by South's ace. A low trump was then led, declarer putting up dummy's king in the hope that West possessed the ace. As is evident, East took the trick with his ace.

East now cashed his ace of clubs, as his counterpart had done when the deal was played originally. He then exited with a low heart, which declarer ruffed. Another trump lead was captured by West's queen. West now completed the coup de grace by leading the queen of clubs. East ruffed this lead, for the setting trick.

Our original declarer's play of not putting up dummy's king of trumps at trick two was the correct play. East, who had opened the bidding and then had doubled the final contract, surely rated to have the ace of trumps.

Canada Drops Two In Baseball

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) Pitcher Fred Cardwell was charged with both losses as Canada dropped two games Tuesday in the World Amateur Baseball Tournament.

Columbia, leading 11-5 when fog forced suspension of a game Monday fight, held Canada scoreless in the last two innings Tuesday and went on to a 14-5 victory.

Later, the Dominican Republic squeezed out a 12-11 win in a game in which Cardwell was the third Canadian pitcher.

The losses evened Canada's record at three wins and three losses.

A 40-minute argument by the Puerto Rican team over a hit batsman resulted in umpires ordering a night game forfeited to the United States.

The U.S., 4-0-1, was ahead, 5-1, at the time.

NOW: IT'S TWO-WAY TRAINS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railways has announced introduction of Canada's first two-way freight train, carrying different cargos both ways among Vancouver, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

In a statement, CNR says with the new system a train would drop one cargo at its destination, be cleaned out, and would have a new cargo loaded for shipment back along the same route.

The statement says the operation represents a new concept in the pooling of equipment in which more than one customer makes use of shipper-owned or leased boxcars.

Previously, potash trains have returned empty from the west coast and cars carrying phosphate rock have moved without cargo on return trips to the west.

Nothing to Lose But the Truth . . .

LONDON (WP) — Liars the world over are being invited to Wasdale in England's Lake District to tell "funny, fantastic and far-fetched fibs" in the Biggest Liar in the World contest Nov. 27.

The contest has been sponsored by BBC Radio Carlisle and the Recreation and Amenities Committee of Copeland Borough Council. (Lying may be a recreation, but is it an amenity?) Wasdale was chosen for the contest because the last world champion liar, Will Ritson, kept an inn there in the past century.

Ritson was famous for preposterous stories told with great narrative cunning and a straight face. They were told in a less sophisticated period and today read like fantastic fairy tales.

There was, for example, the story of a man who crossed dogs with golden eagles. A lord, wearing a jacket of hunting red and riding a horse, came across the eagle-dogs, some sitting in the road and one perched in the branches of a tree.

The dog in the tree began flapping its wings and the terrified lord dashed off down the road. The eagle-dogs, running or flying and barking or shrieking like eagles, chased him for miles until he sought refuge in the sea where the eagle-dogs could not swim.

Contestants will not be able to afford, in the two minutes they are given for their lying, the gentle discursive style of old Will Ritson. Dennis Coath of Radio Carlisle, suggesting something more punchy, offered as examples these two borrowings from a comedian's gag book:

"We were so poor when I was a boy that they pulled our house down to build a slum. When we were cold my father used to keep us warm by sucking a peppermint and breathing over us."

Liars in the contest may be of either sex, and no comment is offered on that. Mechanical aids to the telling of tall tales are forbidden.

One firm condition is that the winner, whenever he or she is publicly billed, advertised, or announced, shall be referred to as "The Biggest Lair in the World."

Readers who fancy themselves as amusing lairs can obtain entry forms from BBC Radio Carlisle, Carlisle CA1 2Na, England.

The first prize is a trophy and, the organizers hope, an entry in the Guinness Book of Records, alongside the World's Long Spit (34 feet 1-4 inch at the Third International Spittin', Belchin' and Cussin' Triathlon in Colorado last year) and the World's Longest Kiss (96 hours, 32 minutes, at a "smoochathlon" earlier this year in Florida).

Jury: Mark Crosswalks

A corner's jury probing the traffic death of a city woman earlier this month recommended Monday night that crosswalks in congested areas have flashing caution lights where possible.

The inquest was examining the death of Annie Smith, 71, of 777 Cook, hit by a car Nov. 8 as she crossed the intersection of Cook and McClure on a rainy night.

The jury said that where there is a concentration of apartments and heavy pedestrian traffic, crosswalks should be clearly defined and, if at all possible, marked for vehicle traffic with flashing lights.

A New Way To Date Cave Art

GREENVALE, N.Y. (UPI) — A. C. W. Post college professor and a professor at the University of Edinburgh Tuesday announced they have been able to estimate the age of ice age cave paintings more accurately by using paleomagnetic dating.

John Kopper, a member of the department of sociology and anthropology at C. W. Post on Long Island said in a statement that he collaborated with Professor Kenneth Creer in Edinburgh to "supply archeologists with the first dates for Upper Paleolithic cave paintings in Tito Bustillo cave, Asturais, Spain."

He said the paleomagnetic technique, based on a knowledge of shifts in the earth's magnetic field over long periods of time, was superior to the radiocarbon dating method.

No Tax Money For Trails

Central Saanich horseback riders can use the municipality's undeveloped roads as trails, but no tax money will be used to improve the trails, council said Monday.

Ald. Zachary Hamilton, one of those not in favor of improvements, said taxpayers' money should not be used to benefit just one segment of the recreation-seeking public.

THE ROGERS' CHRISTMAS CAKE RECIPE

This one you'll keep for years.

If your old Christmas cake recipe seems a little tired, this year try a new tradition. The Rogers' Golden West Fruit Cake. Chosen from thousands entered in Rogers' Recipe Contest. The unique baking qualities of Rogers' Golden Syrup give it a rare, rich flavour—and will help keep it moister, fresher, longer. Try it, and we think you'll keep it for next year. And for years after.

Rogers' Golden West Fruit Cake

1 cup dried apricots
2 cups golden raisins
2 cups dark raisins
1 cup (8 ounces) halved candied cherries
2 cups (16 ounces) diced mixed candied fruits and peels
12 ounces candied pineapple, diced
8 ounces sliced almonds
1 cup shortening
1¼ cup butter
1¼ cups ROGERS' GOLDEN SYRUP
6 large eggs
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves

Line an 8" x 8" x 3½" fruit cake pan with three thicknesses of brown paper and grease inside sheet. Cover apricots with boiling water and let stand 5 minutes. Drain, and using scissors, cut apricots in slices. Combine apricots, raisins, candied fruits and nuts. Mix thoroughly. Cream together shortening, butter and ROGERS' GOLDEN SYRUP. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and spices. Blend into creamed mixture. Stir in fruits and nuts, mixing well. Spoon into prepared pan. Bake in slow oven, 250°F (with shallow pan of hot water on floor of oven) for about 4 hours. Makes about 7 pounds of fruit cake.

Note: Make several weeks before use. Wrap and store. This will give the cake a mellow flavour and it will slice easily.

Nepal Bows to India In Row Over Sikkim

KATMANDU (WP) — The king of Nepal has submitted to a blunt diplomatic campaign by India to intimidate the ruler of this only remaining independent Himalayan monarchy.

King Birendra Bir Bihram Shah Dev said there was no longer "any useful purpose" in Nepal's continuing its protest over the annexation by India of the tiny neighboring kingdom of Sikkim.

The king and his government have been shaken by the Indian action, fearing its implications for their own future. Nepal's overwhelming economic reliance on India has already made the monarchy's future precarious.

Trying to save some face, the king said in an interview that his government's basic stand on Sikkim had not changed. But he conceded that "there are minor points that could be interpreted as our backing down."

When India absorbed Sikkim last September by making it an "associate state," the move sparked angry demonstrations, condoned by the government, in Katmandu. India reacted by summoning home its ambassador and key aid personnel for more than a month, an extreme diplomatic rebuff.

Far more vitriolic protests to the annexation came from such expected quarters as Pakistan and China. (The United States made no comment.) But India was unable to swallow any criticism from Nepal, a little country, which it keeps afloat, primarily as a buffer to China.

Before he left for New Delhi, Indian Ambassador Maharaj Rasgotra bluntly told the Nepalese government that it was "excluded" from the Sikkim affair, a matter he termed "entirely internal."

During Rasgotra's stay in India, the Indian government threatened to "review" relations with Nepal, particularly aid, trade and transit rights. The tough pressure tactics worked.

One of the poorest countries in the world, landlocked Nepal is totally at India's mercy for trade routes. India is also the major donor of economic assistance to Nepal.

A country about the size of Florida with a population of 12 million, Nepal is uncomfortably squeezed between the great land masses of India and China, with a combined population of more than a billion.

Historically, Nepal's relations have always been closer to India than to China, largely because the Indian frontier is wide open while China lies behind the awesome rock and ice wall of the Himalayas.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi did not hesitate to throw her government's full weight on the economic lever. And she has not let up, despite Nepal's repeated assurances that it is no longer interested in "embarrassing" India over Sikkim.

Even after Rasgotra returned to Katmandu, Indian embassy officials warned that Nepal's brief protest "could not be wished away." Rasgotra refused repeated requests by a newsman to discuss the Indian attitude.

Evidently acquiescing to India's continuing demand for a pound of flesh, King Birendra appealed for a renewal of normal relations. "Nepal's good relations with India, which span centuries of history, cannot, in all good sense, be allowed to be disturbed, least of all by minor or sporadic events of a temporal nature," he said. "I do not think any useful purpose will be served by a drawn-out controversy over Sikkim."

Despite the king's effort to paper over the dispute, some members of his government expressed their continuing worry over what they view as an Indian threat to the Nepalese monarchy and independence.

"First they helped overthrow the king of Afghanistan, then they went nuclear and then they took over Sikkim," a senior Cabinet minister said in a private conversation. "If that's not expansionism, what is?"

The 28-year-old Birendra, the world's only Hindu king, offered Mrs. Gandhi the olive branch in an interview that took place in the king's office on the sprawling, walled grounds of the modernistic pagoda-roofed Narayanhity Palace.

SLIDE BLOCKS MALAHAT

A rock slide on the Malahat near the Rock Cut at 5:30 a.m. today caused $400 damage to a panel truck travelling southbound.

Driver Doug Bissenden of Victoria escaped injury.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said traffic was reduced to one lane for more than four hours.

Parts of the highway will be blocked for most of the day as workmen clear the road, the spokesman said.

It was the third slide in the area in the past month-and-a-half.

RCMP said no damage occurred in the earlier slides.

The department of highways has been widening the road north of the slides, but has not done any work where the slides took place.

Arrests of 46 Smash $117M Narcotics Ring

Times News Services

An international police crackdown has dealt a crippling blow to the Bangkok Connection — a $117 million conspiracy to import hundreds of pounds of heroin into the North American market.

Beginning 3 p.m. Tuesday with synchronized raids in Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, New York, San Francisco and Southeast Asia, police arrested 46 people, most of them Chinese, major figures in the heroin trade.

RCMP had warrants for six people in B.C. and by 7 p.m. all had been arrested.

"This is the largest and most significant narcotics prosecution in history," Norm Mullins, regional director of the federal justice department said in Vancouver.

U.S. authorities had told him it was the first time police had reached such high levels in the heroin trade, he said.

The six arrested in B.C. included five from the Vancouver area: Bing Hin Low, 39; Wong Shue Teen, alias Tony Wong, 43; Johnny Chau, alias Chow; Paul Jang, alias Communist Pui, 41; Li Chi Ying, alias Robert Li, 42.

Foon Choy Leong, alias Victor Leong, was arrested in Prince George.

They will appear in County Court in Vancouver today to face extradition proceedings.

The warrants for their arrest were issued to the RCMP after officials received a request signed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Attorney-General William Saxbe, asking for extradition of suspects.

Five federal grand jury indictments unsealed in two southern New York district courts named 71 persons, 25 of whom were cited as unindicted co-conspirators. The indictments, filed in September, remained sealed until today to allow the government time to complete extradition for some of the defendants.

U.S. prosecutors said that among the defendants including two women, were citizens of Canada, the United States, Thailand, Singapore, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Germany.

The indictments allege that 300 pounds of heroin and 100 pounds of opium were smuggled into North America and distributed throughout the continent from 1970 to 1972.

Drug enforcement administrator John R. Bartels, Jr. in Washington estimated the street value of the heroin at $117.5 million. He said the value o fthe opium could not be estimated because it is used in different forms.

The international smuggling operation involved New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, as well as cities in Japan, The Philippines, Thailand and Hong Kong.

Hong Kong.

The indictments said the opium and heroin was grown in Thailand, moved to Hong Kong, and brought to the United States and Canada by Scandinavian seamen who regularly travelled the route.

An investigation begun in the U.S. was aided by cooperation of Thailand police and the Hong Kong Royal Police, Bartels said. He said those arrested abroad were being charged with violating laws of their own countries but also may be subject to extradition to the United States for prosecution under U.S. laws.

U.S. Attorney Paul Curran said the indictments represent

JUMP PREDICTED IN HEROIN COST

The demise of the Bangkok Connection heroin ring will mean higher street prices for the drug and a move to re-establish old supply channels in other parts of the world.

Staff Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria area squad said today heroin will "certainly" increase in price from the current $40 a cap (which, in itself, is double last year's price).

"Whenever that happens we generally get a drop in the number of addicts," he said.

"We could see more Mexican heron coming in and perhaps the re-establishment of old Turkish sources," Staples said. "However, it is very difficult to predict just where it will come from."

Staples said the raids, described the largest in history, will have a "considerable impact" on the supply in Vancouver.

The Victoria market will be "indirectly affected" as virtually all the htroin traffic emanates from Vancouver, he said.

But the pinch won't be felt for at least a month, he added.

"A lot of addicts will be seeking out methadone to tide them over . . . and possibly there will be an increase in breaking and enterings, particularly drug stores.

"The screws are starting to come down on the whole heroin picture . . . provided we can keep the pressure up," he said.

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

PEKING — Premier Barrett and his heartier companions climbed the Great Wall Tuesday and gazed across the dusty foothills and broad plains of China.

The visit was brief as the group had to return to the city for the first of a series of talks with Chinese trade officials.

It was cold and windy at the Wall despite an unusual November sunshine, but the premier donned his heavy fur hat and scrambled up the steep incline of the Wall's walkway, determined to reach its highest point.

A specially-rebuilt section of the 4,000-mile wall is a two-hour drive from Peking and was the first stop on a busy first day of sightseeing and meetings.

The B.C. delegation, their Chinese hosts and interpreters left the hotel early in the morning and drove through the crowded, smoggy streets of Peking as thousands of workers headed out to begin a long day's work.

As the seven-car cavalcade honked and swerved its way past buses, trucks and horse-drawn carts, the people stared in a disinterested way at the shiny cars and their Western passengers.

When the group passed through the last old wall of the city, the sidewalks disappeared and the long rows of dingy grey low-slung houses, stores and small factories finally gave way to open spaces.

Crowds were still everywhere — bicycling to larger factories, working on small sections of the road and gathering in the fields where the last northern cotton crop is being harvested.

The road was filled with a strange assortment of dirty, dilapidated old carts and trucks carrying vegetables, hay and other precious goods, but the most outstanding travellers were the cyclists who carry on their backs huge bundles of twigs for firewood.

As the road begins to wind up the low, dry foothills to the wall, the British Columbians are reminded of the Okanagan.

The neighboring fields are filled with nowbare fruit trees and circular piles of bricks drying in the sun outside small brick factories.

After the Great Wall, the group drives through the majestic forested area of the Ming Tombs where they are treated to a Chinese-style box lunch along with the nowfamiliar tea, beer and orange pop.

Ming Dynasty are displayed outside but while Barrett and his party are openly awed at the splendor of the relics, much to their hosts satisfaction, they express more interest in a giant revolutionary mural alongside which tells of the emperor and his landlords' cruelty to the people.

The guides said today's workers must be given the opportunity to see the magnificent tombs "because it is part of the culture created by the people" but revolutionary reminders are scattered everywhere and one poster in the heart of the tomb said money spent on building the shrine could feed one million people with rice for 6½ years.

Attorney-general Alex Macdonald pleased his companions by saying money "should be spent on people not things."

Back in Peking, Barrett, along with MacMillan Bloedel president Denis Timmis and IWA President Jack Munro, were immediately rushed to their first set of trade talks with the vice-chairman of the Chinese consul for the promotion of international trade.

The 30-minute meeting over tea was formal and slightly strained with the premier hoping to impress on the vice-chairman the wealth of B.C.'s forest products and to receive some concrete answer to his invitation to hold a small Chinese exposition or trade fair in Vancouver.

The host talked at great length about Canadian wheat, about friendship between Canada and China, about the need for communication and visits to build better trade links, but he gently evaded the premier's invitation. As the group stood to leave, Munro put B.C.'s position more bluntly and incited a chuckle from the vice-chairman when he said "not only do we have good wheat, but good lumber."

Embassy official John Higginbotham told the premier the meeting went well and the Chinese were impressed that both a labor and management representative had attended but he warned that "you never, ever, ever know" what their final reaction will be. Barrett appears to be developing a good rapport with his hosts; he is as humble as he can be but still out-going and obviously impressed with what he sees.

External affairs officials warned Barrett before he left that jokes are difficult and do not go over well but Tuesday evening at the first formal banquet put on by the group's hosts, the premier insisted on joking and the Chinese were most receptive — laughing and joking back with him. The eight-course banquet was accompanied by much talk of friendship and expansive toasts from both sides. Barrett presented a book on B.C. flowers to his hosts at the end of the evening and the British Columbians finished their first long day in China. Today the group will visit the grave of Dr. Norman Bethune.

ROCKING CHAIRS big and small, shown by Goodwill employee Betty Wheatley, are among 120 items to go by the gavel at Goodwill's auction Saturday. Other goods at the Collectors Item Auction will include silver teaspoons dated 1898, a two-volume high school textbook from 1887, a New York fireman's helmet, beaded dresses, a mantel clock of the early 1900s, a Mexican sombrero and paintings in both oil and watercolor. Doors at 220 Bay St. open at noon with bidding to start at 1:30.

Doman Gains Slegg Sawmill

Doman Industries Ltd. paid about $1.5 million to Slegg Acceptance Corporation to acquire its Cowichan Bay sawmill site where Doman plans to build a new $7 million forest products complex.

Doman earlier had purchased some of the equipment of the sawmill at public auction.

The property owned by Slegg Forest Products Ltd. was in receivership.

Company president H. S. Doman said today his firm would spend $500,000 clearing sawdust, abandoned logs and other debris from the area in preparation for construction of a new sawmill.

About 25 men would be employed in clean-up operations.

Work on the new sawmill would begin this year and open in August or September, 1975, depending upon market conditions. It would employ 150 men producing 125 million board feet of lumber per year.

Another 150 men will be employed in service operations connected with the new mill, including log sorting and trucking. Doman bought 165 acres of land along with the mill and will use about half that area in the sawmill operation.

The new mill will increase Doman's lumber producing capacity by 50 per cent. Current sawmill capacity is about 250 million board feet per year in Doman sawmills.

747 Crashes 55 Killed

NAIROBI (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and officials for the West German airline said 55 persons were dead and six missing. It was the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747.

The airline's Nairobi manager, Helmuth Wolff, said 96 of the 157 persons aboard survived the crash. Fifty of these, he said, were virtually unhurt.

Wolff said there were 139 passengers aboard, most of them Germans, and 18 crew members. He said previous death figures announced by Kenya's Communications Minister, Omolo Okero, were incorrect.

Lufthansa said they had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, but added that the jumbo jet's flight recorder had been recovered.

Witnesses said the plane apparently lost power shortly after takeoff on the final leg of a Frankfurt-to-Johannesburg, South Africa, flight and its tail section struck an embankment, breaking the plane into a dozen pieces.

UN Plea For Mideast Cool-Down

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has called on Israelis and Arabs to co-operate with UN peacekeeping efforts to prevent a new Middle East war.

Anxious about heightened tension in the area, Waldheim appealed to "all the governments concerned" Tuesday to avoid touching off the fifth war in a quarter-century of crisis.

The call followed reports that Syria is uncertain over letting the UN peacekeeping force remain on the Golan Heights for another six months when the truce team's mandate expires Nov. 30.

Diplomatic sources said Syria is thinking about renewing the mandate for a three-month period instead of for six months.

NEWS BRIEFS

How Sweet It Is

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Michigan Sugar Co. said Tuesday its profits during the past 12 months were up 2,000 per cent above the 1973 fiscal year with sales just about doubled. The profits would have been a 4,000-per-cent increase except for a change in accounting procedures, the company said.

Woods Woes Deepen

VANCOUVER (CP)— The Council of Forest Industries says that unemployment in the British Columbia forest industry continues to climb. Executive vice-president N. R. Dusting, FIR executive vice-president, said Tuesday the current layoff figure is 15,258, an increase of four per cent since Nov. 1 when the total was 14,719 workers laid off.

Swiss Franc Rush

BERN (AP) — Switzerland moved Wednesday to check an international rush for the Swiss franc by imposing a stiff penalty on all new non-resident deposits. The move aimed to restore calm to the monetary markets after demand for the franc had sent the U.S. dollar and all other major western currencies declining sharply against the Swiss currency.

Ties With Tokyo Pledged by Ford

TOKYO (UPI) — Amid predictions the ruling Japanese government might fall within the week, President Ford agreed today with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka on the need to halt the spread of nuclear weapons and pledged closer ties between the two countries.

Ford wound up his hectic second full day in Tokyo at a banquet for Emperor Hirohito with a toast to "the government of Japan and millions and millions of Japanese."

Borrowing the words of the first Japanese envoy to the United States, Ford told Hirohito the most important lesson he had learned in his "memorable" trip to Japan was "the time has come when no nation may remain isolated and refuse to take part in the affairs of the rest of the world."

Ford began his day with a second round of talks with Tanaka, then addressed a luncheon at the Japan Press Club, watched a demonstration of martial arts and attended three cocktail parties prior to the banquet. One party was for leaders of the U.S. community in Japan.

Tanaka and Ford issued a joint communique agreeing on the need to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons — a clear effort to appease Japanese sensitivities over recent reports that U.S. warships bearing atomic weapons have stopped in Japanese ports.

The communique also appeared to signal Japan's willingness, after initial opposition, to accept a Ford administration proposal for all oil consuming nations to cut their petroleum imports by 10 per cent.

Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger said Ford's official discussion in Tokyo had "achieved the otpimum of what he could have hoped for."

Budget Takes Blame For Oil Price Drop

CALGARY (CP) — Prices of Canadian-based oil company stocks declined Tuesday in response to provisions in the federal budget, says Ernie Braithwaite, vice-president of the Alberta district, Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

He said oil stock prices were off 10 points, one of the largest drops this year and the largest since May 7, the day after the initial federal budget was introduced.

The budget Monday night refused oil companies the right to deduct provincial royalties from their income taxes.

Braithwaite said the shares traded Tuesday were in small volumes, indicating that individual shareholders were disposing of their holdings.

But another investment spokesman said the decline in prices was an "over-reaction" and prices should begin to pick up today.

UAW Insists Chrysler Boss Quit

DETROIT (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employees scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three auto employees out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice-President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,00 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from Nov. 27 until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The company's Windsor, Ont., plant will remain in operation.

The firm is the seventh largest in the United States with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 20,300 workers already on layoffs, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December.

About 95,000 auto workers were on layoffs this week including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler. The remaining 31,575 are on temporary layoff.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent.

UAW spokesman Fraser said Chrysler will save $19 million in holiday pay by laying off the workers.

Under a special agreement reached with the UAW Tuesday, workers with more than a year seniority will receive 100 per cent of their regular take home pay during the eight-day holiday period, including company and government unemployment benefits.

175 More Mounties Promised To Bolster Coverage in B.C.

RCMP manpower in the province will be increased by 175 officers this fiscal year and "hopefully, considerably more" next year, Assistant Commissioner Ed Willes said in an interview Tuesday.

Willes declined to say how many more men he would be seeking because 1975 contract negotiations have not been completed with the provincial government.

He said the planning for this year's allotment was done more than a year ago and is on par with additions made to the force over the past five years.

If the request for an augmented yearly recruitment is approved, he said, "We should get caught up with the national average within three years."

The B.C. Police Commission, under Dr. John Hogarth, has said the RCMP strength in the province is 350 officers short of the national average based on a police-to-population ratio.

And that figure only applies to the 1,200-member provincial force. It does not include the 2,000 RCMP officers who man detachments under direct contract to municipalities.

Willes said the commission's figure was "reasonable estimate".

He said no study has been completed on how many more men would be required to bring municipal RCMP forces up to the national level.

However, there are indications the police manpower shortage in the province is in the range of 1,700 to 1,800 below the national level based on police to number of Criminal code offences.

REFLECTION on 42 years of community service, G. Stanley Eden of 3115 Wascana admires silver tray presented him this week by Saanich council. A member of the police commission for 34 years and an alderman for eight, Eden told council aldermen got their "boxing practice" at election meetings during his days. He recalled the 1920s when meetings were packed and bands of hecklers flourished.

Geographical impossibility notwithstanding, the Empress Hotel has been awarded the Diploma of European Excellence.

GRAY

From a CP Hotels handout, we learn that the honor was bestowed by the Committee of European Excellence, "an association created in France to recognize quality and excellence in all fields of acitvity."

Recipients of the award—including the Pierre Hotel in New York, the Stanford Court in San Francisco and the Beverly Wilshire in Beverly Hills—are establishments "instrumental in furthering the cultural and economic development of their respective countries, while respecting a European tradition of quality," the press release says with due solemnity.

Well, bully for The Empress and manager Bill Gray. Now is there, we can't help wondering, a Diploma of Canadian Excellence to mark observance of "a Canadian tradition of quality?"

In some respects, Mayor Peter Pollen displays a bewildering tendency to be consistently inconsistent.

Consider, for example, his stand on the whole question of abolishing automatic voting rights for businesses, absentee landlords and property owners in municipal elections.

Almost exactly a year ago, Pollen roundly denounced the legislation as "frightening," and agreed with other members of city council that it unfairly disenfranchised the business community.

Deprived of a business vote himself, because his automobile dealership is in the city but he lives in Oak Bay, Pollen said at that time: "You can lead an army but you can't have anything to do with it."

But by last week the mayor's opinions seemed to have travelled full-circle. He scoffed at downtown businessmen for voicing concern on the matter, when before the changes they had not deplored the fact that some business owners had been entitled to five, six or more votes.

Said Pollen to council (did any of them recall his comments of a year ago?): "I think this example of disenfranchisement is a good thing. Those who live in a city should control the city."

Will he change his mind again before he vacates the mayor's seat next November?

Saanich alderman Mel Couvelier, piqued when a radio commentator criticized Saanich aldermen for being colorless, is going to do something about it.

He and Alderman Joe Bourque are taking to color television, co-chairing a show "Saanich Issues", to be held at 9 p.m. on Channel 10 every other Thursday, beginning Jan. 9.

It is hoped Saanich residents will take an active part in the open-line sessions, which will replace the open forum meetings, held in the afternoon at municipal hall earlier this year.

Other aldermen and municipal staff will also appear.

"It's going to be in color," Bourque said. "We should wear our brightest smiles."

"It will be colorful alright," Alderman Fred Severson quipped, after Lum said such issues as property tax loads, the housing crisis and impact on neighborhood values would be aired.

If Rain Had Been Snow . . .

Clouds over Victoria this week have dropped more than an inch of rain to bring the November rainfall total to more than five inches at the airport.

If all that had been snow Victorians would be trudging through more than three feet of it now, according to a weather office spokesman.

This year's November precipitation is just over that of 1973 though some of last year's was snow.

Total rainfall for 1974 so far is 28.5 inches at the airport and about 20.5 inches at the Gonzales weather station.

Early Start On Spectrum Predicted

Work will likely begin early next year on the new building for Spectrum community secondary school, Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn predicted today.

The project finally won approval Tuesday of Education Minister Eileen Dailly, but Bunn said the working out of final details with the education department and contractor Wiliam Campbell will take several more weeks.

The three-storey building at Burnside and Acorn will probably be ready for occupancy in September 1976, he said.

Dailly has approved expenditure of $3.5 million on the building, plus an unspecified amount for site development to be negotiated by the board and education department.

Total construction cost could be closer to $4.5 million.

Spectrum school will remain temporarily located at the Mt. View school building on Carey Rd. until the new building opens.

Glazier Housing Leader?

Victoria alderman-elect Murray Glazier appears destined for the miportant housing portfolio on city council when he starts his civic duties in January.

Only three days after his first-attempt success in Saturday's civic election, Glazier was present at council's regular Tuesday afternoon caucus meeting by invitation of Mayor Peter Pollen.

It was the first time in recent years that any neophyte alderman has attended meetings in an observer capacity prior to being sworn in — the traditional assumption-of-office ceremony which takes place at council's first meeting of the New Year.

Pollen explained to other council members: "I thought it was a good idea to have the incumbents get together with the new guys so we can have an orderly transition."

Later in the meeting, moments after a brief mention of tonight's public hearing on the Neighborhood Improvement Program for James Bay and Victoria West, Pollen appeared to be referring to Glazier when he said in an aside to an alderman:

"It makes sense to have him here as he's going to be taking this over."

Defeated incumbent Ald. Percy Frampton is currently responsible, as housing committee chairman, for steering the NIP proposals throuh to a firm adoption of spending priorities in the two neighborhoods.

The city's list has to be completed by Nov. 30 for submission to Ottawa, but the program's implementation will be spread over the next two years at least.

'Dishonest' Builders Target in Saanich

Saanich will get tough with dishonest, fly-by-night contractors.

On the recommendation of development engineer J. R. Walker, much heavier ifnes will be sought for infractions of the building and licence bylaws.

The amount of permit fees and supporting surety bonds will be substantially increased.

Development engineer J. R. Walker told the public works committee Tuesday:

"There is a definite burden on the municipality and its employees to act aggressively and efficiently in the enforcement of the building bylaw. (See also Page 2.)

"Our concern here is that too many cases arise where dishonest or irresponsible builders fail to call for the staged inspections set out clearly in the building code and proceed to sell houses for which occupancy permits have not been granted. In many cases, the new homeowner looks to us to force the original builder to return and make good deficiencies. In few cases we have been successful."

Walker recommended that the minimum fine for first offences be raised from $25 to $100 and the maximum for first offences, from $300 to $500. Subsequent offences should be raised from $50 minimum to $250 minimum and $300 maximum to $750.

Walker said this would remove the "gambling licence" now being enjoyed by builders who broke the rules, taking the risk of being taken to court for a minimum fine. The courts, he said, rarely levied more than the minimum penalty on the offenders.

The committee also agreed with Walker that the scale of building and plumbing permit fees was far too low.

Walker said the inspection department was costing Saanich $190,000 a year while revenues from permits amounted only to between $85,000 and $90,000.

Mayor Ed Lum agreed with Walker's assertion that requirements for a tradesman's licence should be "tightened up."

Fugitive Near RCMP Office

One of Canada's 10 most wanted men was arrested Tuesday night in a house less than a quarter-mile from the Shawnigan Lake RCMP detachment office.

Randolph Bruce Byrle Johanson, 37, appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning and was charged with escape, possession of hashish, theft over $200 and possession of a restricted firearm.

He was remanded to Nov. 27 for election of trial method and plea.

Johanson had been at large since April 8, 1972, when he and two other men escaped from William Head prison.

Colwood RCMP Sgt. Gerry O'Neil said members of his detachment and Duncan's, acting on a tip from Nanaimo police, went to a residence behind Mason's store in Shawnigan Village early Tuesday evening.

After a four-hour surveillance officers entered the building and arrested a man whom they believed to be Johanson.

The man, who used a different name, offered no resistance. Police found an unloaded .22 revolver in his packsack.

O'Neil said the man told them he had worked in northern Vancouver Island logging camps for the past two years.

He was visiting a workmate at the time of his arrest.

A clinic will be held Thursday in the Princess Charlotte room of The Empress from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Everybody is welcome. (John McKay photo)

$3,000 BAIL SET

Bail was set at $3,000 Tuesday for a 22-year-old man accused of three offences, including "confining" a Victoria man.

Douglas Stanley Halstead, of no fixed address, was charged in provincial court with confining George Salvadore, extorting $20 from the petty cash of Thomas Plimley Ltd., 1010 Yates, and stealing a 1973 Triumph from Thomas Plimley Ltd. The offences are alleged to have occurred Nov. 12.

Information supplied to the court at the bail hearing by prosecutor Gordon Macdonald and lawyer Gordon Detwiller was banned from publication or broadcast at Detwiller's request.

Halstead was remanded to Friday for election of trial method.

Talks Started Again On Disputed Property

Long-running negotiations between the city of Victoria and the Greater Victoria School Board, over a parcel of city-owned land on Cecelia Street, were resumed Tuesday after a lengthy delay but with a new slant.

The eight lots in question are next to the school district's distribution centre, and the board has been trying to acquire the property for more than two years.

But last year city council attached strings to the deal. It insisted the school board should pay not only half the market price, but also settle a $60,000 outstanding bill for health services.

The board reacted angrily, with chairman Peter Bunn calling the proposition "blackmail," and claimed the $86,574 selling price laid down by the city was far higher than the price originally agreed under a "gentleman's agreement."

Trustees also disputed the city's contention that they were in debt for health services, saying the board would only pay for health services actually rendered and not a share of all health costs.

There the matter apparently rested, until Tuesday. But today a city source said the negotiations have "turned away from the aspect of compensation." In other words, the controversial health bill has been dropped.

Ald. Mike Young, chairman of the zoning and land-use planning committee, confirmed that the basis of talks now is land trading, and predicted the matter could be resolved within two weeks.

"We're looking basically at who owns what and who needs what," he said, but declined to give any further details on grounds that this would prejudice the negotiations.

However, city sources said Victoria may be suggesting some kind of land swap which would see the Cecelia Street property exchanged for school board property near South Park School which the city wants.

Recreational and community uses would be appropriate to that location opposite Beacon Hill Park, they said.

SLIDE BLOCKS MALAHAT

A rock slide on the Malahat near the Rock Cut at 5:30 a.m. today caused $400 damage to a panel truck travelling southbound.

Driver Doug Bissenden of Victoria escaped injury.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said traffic was reduced to one lane for more than four hours.

Parts of the highway will be blocked for most of the day as workmen clear the road, the spokesman said.

It was the third slide in the area in the past month-and-a-half.

RCMP said no damage occurred in the earlier slides.

The department of highways has been widening the road north of the slides, but has not done any work where the slides took place.

Arrests of 46 Smash $117M Narcotics Ring

Times News Services

An international police crackdown has dealt a crippling blow to the Bangkok Connection — a $117 million conspiracy to import hundreds of pounds of heroin into the North American market.

Beginning 3 p.m. Tuesday with synchronized raids in Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, New York, San Francisco and Southeast Asia, police arrested 46 people, most of them Chinese, major figures in the heroin trade.

RCMP had warrants for six people in B.C. and by 7 p.m. all had been arrested.

"This is the largest and most significant narcotics prosecution in history," Norm Mullins, regional director of the federal justice department said in Vancouver.

U.S. authorities had told him it was the first time police had reached such high levels in the heroin trade, he said.

The six arrested in B.C. included five from the Vancouver area: Bing Hin Low, 39; Wong Shue Teen, alias Tony Wong, 43; Johnny Chau, alias Chow; Paul Jang, alias Communist Pui, 41; Li Chi Ying, alias Robert Li, 42.

Foon Choy Leong, alias Victor Leong, was arrested in Prince George.

They will appear in County Court in Vancouver today to face extradition proceedings.

The warrants for their arrest were issued to the RCMP after officials received a request signed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Attorney-General William Saxbe, asking for extradition of suspects.

Five federal grand jury indictments unsealed in two southern New York district courts named 71 persons, 25 of whom were cited as unindicted co-conspirators. The indictments, filed in September, remained sealed until today to allow the government time to complete extradition for some of the defendants.

U.S. prosecutors said that among the defendants including two women, were citizens of Canada, the United States, Thailand, Singapore, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Germany.

The indictments allege that 300 pounds of heroin and 100 pounds of opium were smuggled into North America and distributed throughout the continent from 1970 to 1972.

Drug enforcement administrator John R. Bartels, Jr. in Washington estimated the street value of the heroin at $117.5 million. He said the value of the opium could not be estimated because it is used in different forms.

The international smuggling operation involved New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, as well as cities in Japan, The Philippines, Thailand and Hong Kong.

The indictments said the opium and heroin was grown in Thailand, moved to Hong Kong, and brought to the United States and Canada by Scandinavian seamen who regularly travelled the route.

An investigation begun in the U.S., was aided by cooperation of Thailand police and the Hong Kong Royal Police, Bartels said. He said those arrested abroad were being charged with violating laws of their own countries but also may be subject to extradition to the United States for prosecution under U.S. laws.

U.S. Attorney Paul Curran said the indictments represent

JUMP PREDICTED IN HEROIN COST

The demise of the Bangkok Connection heroin ring will mean higher street prices for the drug and a move to re-establish old supply channels in other parts of the world.

Staff Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria area squad said today heroin will "certainly" increase in price from the current $40 a cap (which, in itself, is double last year's price).

"Whenever that happens we generally get a drop in the number of addicts," he said.

"We could see more Mexican heroin coming in and perhaps the re-establishment of old Turkish sources," Staples said. "However, it is very difficult to predict just where it will come from."

Staples said the raids, described the largest in history, will have a "considerable impact" on the supply in Vancouver.

The Victoria market will be "indirectly affected" as virtually all the heroin traffic emanates from Vancouver, he said.

But the pinch won't be felt for at least a month, he added.

"A lot of addicts will be seeking out methadone to tide them over . . . and possibly there will be an increase in breaking and enterings, particularly drug stores.

"The screws are starting to come down on the whole heroin picture . . . provided we can keep the pressure up," he said.

Chill View But Warm Reception

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

PEKING — Premier Barrett and his heartier companions climbed the Great Wall Tuesday and gazed across the dusty foothills and broad plains of China.

The visit was brief as the group had to return to the city for the first of a series of talks with Chinese trade officials.

It was cold and windy at the Wall despite an unusual November sunshine, but the premier donned his heavy fur hat and scrambled up the steep incline of the Wall's walkway, determined to reach its highest point.

A specially-rebuilt section of the 4,000-mile wall is a two-hour drive from Peking and was the first stop on a busy first day of sightseeing and meetings.

The B.C. delegation, their Chinese hosts and interpreters left the hotel early in the morning and drove through the crowded, smoggy streets of Peking as thousands of workers headed out to begin a long day's work.

As the seven-car cavalcade honked and swerved its way past buses, trucks and horse-drawn carts, the people stared in a disinterested way at the shiny cars and their Western passengers.

When the group passed through the last old wall of the city, the sidewalks disappeared and the long rows of dingy grey low-slung houses, stores and small factories finally gave way to open spaces.

Crowds were still everywhere — bicycling to larger factories, working on small sections of the road and gathering in the fields where the last northern cotton crop is being harvested.

The road was filled with a strange assortment of dirty, dilapidated old carts and trucks carrying vegetables, hay and other precious goods, but the most outstanding travellers were the cyclists carrying on their backs huge bundles of twigs for firewood.

As the road begins to wind up the low, dry foothills to the wall, the British Columbians are reminded of the Okanagan.

The neighboring fields are filled with now-bare fruit trees and circular piles of bricks drying in the sun outside small brick factories.

After the Great Wall, the group drove through the majestic forested area of the Ming Tombs where they were treated to a Chinese-style box lunch along with the now-familiar tea, beer and orange pop.

The gold and jewels of the 400-year-old Ming Dynasty are displayed outside but while Barrett and his party were openly awed at the splendor of the relics, much to their hosts satisfaction, they expressed more interest in a giant revolutionary mural alongside which told of the emperor and his landlords' cruelty to the people.

The guides said today's workers must be given the opportunity to see the magnificent tombs "because it is part of the culture created by the people" but revolutionary reminders are scattered everywhere and one poster in the heart of the tomb said money spent on building the shrine could feed one million people with rice for 6½ years.

Attorney-general Alex Macdonald pleased his companions by saying money "should be spent on people not things."

Back in Peking, Barrett, along with MacMillan Bloedel president Denis Timmis and IWA President Jack Munro, were immediately rushed to their first set of trade talks with the vice-chairman of the Chinese council for the promotion of international trade.

The 30-minute meeting over tea was formal and slightly strained with the premier hoping to impress on the vice-chairman the wealth of B.C.'s forest products and to receive some concrete answer to his invitation to hold a small Chinese exposition or trade fair in Vancouver.

The host talked at great length about Canadian wheat, about friendship between Canada and China, about the need for communication and visits to build better trade links, but he gently evaded the premier's invitation. As the group stood to leave, Munro put B.C.'s position more bluntly and incited a chuckle from the vice-chairman when he said "not only do we have good wheat, but good lumber."

Embassy official John Higginbotham told the premier the meeting went well and the Chinese were impressed that both a labor and management representative had attended but he warned that "you never, ever, ever know" what their final reaction will be. Barrett appears to be developing a good rapport with his hosts; he is as humble as he can be but still out-going and obviously impressed with what he sees.

External affairs officials warned Barrett before he left that jokes are difficult and do not go over well but Tuesday evening at the first formal banquet put on by the group's hosts, the premier insisted on joking and the Chinese were most receptive — laughing and joking back with him. The eight-course banquet was accompanied by much talk of friendship and expansive toasts from both sides. Barrett presented a book on B.C. flowers to his hosts at the end of the evening and the British Columbians finished their first long day in China. Today the group will visit the grave of Dr. Norman Bethune.

Doman Gains Slegg Sawmill

Doman Industries Ltd. paid about $1.5 million to Slegg Acceptance Corporation to acquire its Cowichan Bay sawmill site where Doman plans to build a new $7 million forest products complex.

Doman earlier had purchased some of the equipment of the sawmill at public auction.

The property owned by Slegg Forest Products Ltd. was in receivership.

Company president H. S. Doman said today his firm would spend $500,000 clearing sawdust, abandoned logs and other debris from the area in preparation for construction of a new sawmill.

About 25 men would be employed in clean-up operations.

Work on the new sawmill would begin this year and open in August or September, 1975, depending upon market conditions. It would employ 150 men producing 125 million board feet of lumber per year.

Another 150 men will be employed in service operations connected with the new mill, including log sorting and trucking. Doman bought 165 acres of land along with the mill and will use about half that area in the sawmill operation.

The new mill will increase Doman's lumber producing capacity by 50 per cent. Current sawmill capacity is about 250 million board feet per year in Doman sawmills.

747 Crashes 55 Killed

NAIROBI (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and officials for the West German airline said 55 persons were dead and six missing. It was the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747.

The airline's Nairobi manager, Helmuth Wolff, said 96 of the 157 persons aboard survived the crash. Fifty of these, he said, were virtually unhurt.

Wolff said there were 139 passengers aboard, most of them Germans, and 18 crew members. He said previous death figures announced by Kenya's Communications Minister, Omolo Okero, were incorrect.

Lufthansa said they had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, but added that the jumbo jet's flight recorder had been recovered.

Witnesses said the plane apparently lost power shortly after takeoff on the final leg of a Frankfurt-to-Johannesburg, South Africa, flight and its tail section struck an embankment, breaking the plane into a dozen pieces.

AT & T Trading Halted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The justice department brought anti-trust charges against American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. today, accusing the world's largest privately owned firm of monopolizing telecommunications service and equipment in the United States.

The civil suit, which also names Western Electric Co. Inc., and Bell Telephone Laboratories Inc., as defendants, asked the court for "substantial divestiture by AT&T"

The Securities and Exchange Commission earlier halted trading of AT&T securities at 3 p.m. EST.

The suit charges the three defendants "with combining and conspiring to monopolize, attempting to monopolize and monopolizing the telecommunications service and equipments market . . ."

NEWS BRIEFS

How Sweet It Is

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Michigan Sugar Co. said Tuesday its profits during the past 12 months were up 2,000 per cent above the 1973 fiscal year with sales just about doubled. The profits would have been a 4,000-per-cent increase except for a change in accounting procedures, the company said.

Woods Woes Deepen

VANCOUVER (CP)— The Council of Forest Industries says that unemployment in the British Columbia forest industry continues to climb. Executive vice-president, N. R. Dusting, FIR executive vice-president, said Tuesday the current layoff figure is 15,258, an increase of four per cent since Nov. 1 when the total was 14,719 workers laid off.

Swiss Franc Rush

BERN (AP) — Switzerland moved Wednesday to check an international rush for the Swiss franc by imposing a stiff penalty on all new non-resident deposits. The move aimed to restore calm to the monetary markets after demand for the franc had sent the U.S. dollar and all other major western currencies declining sharply against the Swiss currency.

Ties With Tokyo Pledged by Ford

TOKYO (UPI) — Amid predictions the ruling Japanese government might fall within the week, President Ford agreed today with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka on the need to halt the spread of nuclear weapons and pledged closer ties between the two countries.

Ford wound up his hectic second full day in Tokyo at a banquet for Emperor Hirohito with a toast to "the government of Japan and millions and millions of Japanese."

Borrowing the words of the first Japanese envoy to the United States, Ford told Hirohito the most important lesson he had learned in his "memorable" trip to Japan was "the time has come when no nation may remain isolated and refuse to take part in the affairs of the rest of the world."

Ford began his day with a second round of talks with Tanaka, then addressed a luncheon at the Japan Press Club, watched a demonstration of martial arts and attended three cocktail parties prior to the banquet. One party was for leaders of the U.S. community in Japan.

Tanaka and Ford issued a joint communique agreeing on the need to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons — a clear effort to appease Japanese sensitivities over recent reports that U.S. warships bearing atomic weapons have stopped in Japanese ports.

The communique also appeared to signal Japan's willingness, after initial opposition, to accept a Ford administration proposal for all oil consuming nations to cut their petroleum imports by 10 per cent.

Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger said Ford's official discussion in Tokyo had "achieved the optimum of what he could have hoped for."

Budget Takes Blame For Oil Stock Drop

CALGARY (CP) — Prices of Canadian-based oil company stocks declined Tuesday in response to provisions in the federal budget, says Ernie Braithwaite, vice-president of the Alberta district, Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

He said oil stock prices were off 10 points, one of the largest drops this year and the largest since May 7, the day after the initial federal budget was introduced.

The budget Monday night refused oil companies the right to deduct provincial royalties from their income taxes.

Braithwaite said the shares traded Tuesday were in small volumes, indicating that individual shareholders were disposing of their holdings.

But another investment spokesman said the decline in prices was an "over-reaction" and prices should begin to pick up today.

UAW Insists Chrysler Boss Quit

DETROIT (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employees scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three auto employees out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice-President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,000 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from Nov. 27 until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The company's Windsor, Ont., plant will remain in operation.

The firm is the seventh largest in the United States with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 20,300 workers already on layoffs, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December.

About 95,000 auto workers were on layoffs this week including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler. The remaining 31,575 are on temporary layoff.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent.

UAW spokesman Fraser said Chrysler will save $19 million in holiday pay by laying off the workers.

Under a special agreement reached with the UAW Tuesday, workers with more than a year seniority will receive 100 per cent of their regular take home pay during the eight-day holiday period, including company and government unemployment benefits.

SLIDE BLOCKS MALAHAT

A rock slide on the Malahat near the Rock Cut at 5:30 a.m. today caused $400 damage to a panel truck travelling southbound.

Driver Doug Bissenden of Victoria escaped injury.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said traffic was reduced to one lane for more than four hours.

Parts of the highway will be blocked for most of the day as workmen clear the road, the spokesman said.

It was the third slide in the area in the past month-and-a-half.

RCMP said no damage occurred in the earlier slides.

The department of highways has been widening the road north of the slides, but has not done any work where the slides took place.

Arrests of 46 Smash $117M Narcotics Ring

Times News Services

An international police crackdown has dealt a crippling blow to the Bangkok Connection — a $117 million conspiracy to import hundreds of pounds of heroin into the North American market.

Beginning 3 p.m. Tuesday with synchronized raids in Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, New York, San Francisco and Southeast Asia, police arrested 46 people, most of them Chinese, major figures in the heroin trade.

RCMP had warrants for six people in B.C. and by 7 p.m. all had been arrested.

"This is the largest and most significant narcotics prosecution in history," Norm Mullins, regional director of the federal justice department said in Vancouver.

U.S. authorities had told him it was the first time police had reached such high levels in the heroin trade, he said.

The six arrested in B.C. included five from the Vancouver area: Bing Hin Low, 39; Wong Shue Teen, alias Tony Wong, 43; Johnny Chau, alias Chow; Paul Jang, alias Communist Pui, 41; Li Chi Ying, alias Robert Li, 42.

Foon Choy Leong, alias Victor Leong, was arrested in Prince George.

They will appear in County Court in Vancouver today to face extradition proceedings.

The warrants for their arrest were issued to the RCMP after officials received a request signed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Attorney-General William Saxbe, asking for extradition of suspects.

Five federal grand jury indictments unsealed in two southern New York district courts named 71 persons, 25 of whom were cited as unindicted co-conspirators. The indictments, filed in September, remained sealed until today to allow the government time to complete extradition for some of the defendants.

U.S. prosecutors said that among the defendants including two women, were citizens of Canada, the United States, Thailand, Singapore, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Germany.

The indictments allege that 300 pounds of heroin and 100 pounds of opium were smuggled into North America and distributed throughout the continent from 1970 to 1972.

Drug enforcement administrator John R. Bartels, Jr. in Washington estimated the street value of the heroin at $117.5 million. He said the value of the opium could not be estimated because it is used in different forms.

The international smuggling operation involved New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, as well as cities in Japan, The Philippines, Thailand and Hong Kong.

The indictments said the opium and heroin was grown in Thailand, moved to Hong Kong, and brought to the United States and Canada by Scandinavian seamen who regularly travelled the route.

An investigation begun in the U.S. was aided by cooperation of Thailand police and the Hong Kong Royal Police, Bartels said. He said those arrested abroad were being charged with violating laws of their own countries but also may be subject to extradition to the United States for prosecution under U.S. laws.

U.S. Attorney Paul Curran said the indictments represent

JUMP PREDICTED IN HEROIN COST

The demise of the Bangkok Connection heroin ring will mean higher street prices for the drug and a move to re-establish old supply channels in other parts of the world.

Staff Sgt. Dave Staples, head of the Victoria area squad said today heroin will "certainly" increase in price from the current $40 a cap (which, in itself, is double last year's price).

"Whenever that happens we generally get a drop in the number of addicts," he said.

"We could see more Mexican heroin coming in and perhaps the re-establishment of old Turkish sources," Staples said. "However, it is very difficult to predict just where it will come from."

Staples said the raids, described the largest in history, will have a "considerable impact" on the supply in Vancouver.

The Victoria market will be "indirectly affected" as virtually all the heroin traffic emanates from Vancouver, he said.

But the pinch won't be felt for at least a month, he added.

"A lot of addicts will be seeking out methadone to tide them over . . . and possibly there will be an increase in breaking and enterings, particularly drug stores.

"The screws are starting to come down on the whole heroin picture . . . provided we can keep the pressure up," he said.

Chill View But Warm Reception

PEKING — Premier Barrett and his heartier companions climbed the Great Wall Tuesday and gazed across the dusty foothills and broad plains of China.

The visit was brief as the group had to return to the city for the first of a series of talks with Chinese trade officials.

It was cold and windy at the Wall despite an unusual November sunshine, but the premier donned his heavy fur hat and scrambled up the steep incline of the Wall's walkway, determined to reach its highest point.

A specially-rebuilt section of the 4,000-mile wall is a two-hour drive from Peking and was the first stop on a busy first day of sightseeing and meetings.

The B.C. delegation, their Chinese hosts and interpreters left the hotel early in the morning and drove through the crowded, smoggy streets of Peking as thousands of workers headed out to begin a long day's work.

As the seven-car cavalcade honked and swerved its way past buses, trucks and horse-drawn carts, the people stared in a disinterested way at the shiny cars and their Western passengers.

When the group passed through the last old wall of the city, the sidewalks disappeared and the long rows of dingy grey low-slung houses, stores and small factories finally gave way to open spaces.

Crowds were still everywhere — bicycling to larger factories, working on small sections of the road and gathering in the fields where the last northern cotton crop is being harvested.

The road was filled with a strange assortment of dirty, dilapidated old carts and trucks carrying vegetables, hay and other precious goods, but the most outstanding travellers were the cyclists carrying on their backs huge bundles of twigs for firewood.

As the road begins to wind up the low, dry foothills to the wall, the British Columbians are reminded of the Okanagan.

The neighboring fields are filled with nowbare fruit trees and circular piles of bricks drying in the sun outside small brick factories.

After the Great Wall, the group drove through the majestic forested area of the Ming Tombs where they were treated to a Chinese-style box lunch along with the nowfamiliar tea, beer and orange pop.

The gold and jewels of the 400-year-old Ming Dynasty are displayed outside but while Barrett and his party were openly awed at the splendor of the relics, much to their hosts satisfaction, they expressed more interest in a giant revolutionary mural alongside which told of the emperor and his landlords' cruelty to the people.

The guides said today's workers must be given the opportunity to see the magnificent tombs "because it is part of the culture created by the people" but revolutionary reminders are scattered everywhere and one poster in the heart of the tomb said money spent on building the shrine could feed one million people with rice for 6½ years.

Attorney-general Alex Macdonald pleased his companions by saying money "should be spent on people not things."

Back in Peking, Barrett, along with MacMillan Bloedel president Denis Timmis and IWA President Jack Munro, were immediately rushed to their first set of trade talks with the vice-chairman of the Chinese council for the promotion of international trade.

The 30-minute meeting over tea was formal and slightly strained with the premier hoping to impress on the vice-chairman the wealth of B.C.'s forest products and to receive some concrete answer to his invitation to hold a small Chinese exposition or trade fair in Vancouver.

The host talked at great length about Canadian wheat, about friendship between Canada and China, about the need for communication and visits to build better trade links, but he gently evaded the premier's invitation. As the group stood to leave, Munro put B.C.'s position more bluntly and incited a chuckle from the vice-chairman when he said "not only do we have good wheat, but good lumber."

Embassy official John Higginbotham told the premier the meeting went well and the Chinese were impressed that both a labor and management representative had attended but he warned that "you never, ever, ever know" what their final reaction will be. Barrett appears to be developing a good rapport with his hosts; he is as humble as he can be but still out-going and obviously impressed with what he sees.

External affairs officials warned Barrett before he left that jokes are difficult and do not go over well but Tuesday evening at the first formal banquet put on by the group's hosts, the premier insisted on joking and the Chinese were most receptive — laughing and joking back with him. The eight-course banquet was accompanied by much talk of friendship and expansive toasts from both sides. Barrett presented a book on B.C. flowers to his hosts at the end of the evening and the British Columbians finished their first long day in China. Today the group will visit the grave of Dr. Norman Bethune.

ROCKING CHAIRS big and small, shown by Goodwill employee Betty Wheatley, are among 120 items to go by the gavel at Goodwill's auction Saturday. Other goods at the Collectors Item Auction will include silver teaspoons dated 1898, a two-volume high school textbook from 1887, a New York fireman's helmet, beaded dresses, a mantel clock of the early 1900s, a Mexican sombrero and paintings in both oil and watercolor. Doors at 220 Bay St. open at noon with bidding to start at 1:30.

Doman Gains Slegg Sawmill

Doman Industries Ltd. paid about $1.5 million to Slegg Acceptance Corporation to acquire its Cowichan Bay sawmill site where Doman plans to build a new $7 million forest products complex.

Doman earlier had purchased some of the equipment of the sawmill at public auction.

The property owned by Slegg Forest Products Ltd. was in receivership.

Company president H. S. Doman said today his firm would spend $500,000 clearing sawdust, abandoned logs and other debris from the area in preparation for construction of a new sawmill.

About 25 men would be employed in clean-up operations.

Work on the new sawmill would begin this year and open in August or September, 1975, depending upon market conditions. It would employ 150 men producing 125 million board feet of lumber per year.

Another 150 men will be employed in service operations connected with the new mill, including log sorting and trucking. Doman bought 165 acres of land along with the mill and will use about half that area in the sawmill operation.

The new mill will increase Doman's lumber producing capacity by 50 per cent. Current sawmill capacity is about 250 million board feet per year in Doman sawmills.

747 Crashes 55 Killed

NAIROBI (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and officials for the West German airline said 55 persons were dead and six missing. It was the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747.

The airline's Nairobi manager, Helmutn Wolff, said 96 of the 157 persons aboard survived the crash. Fifty of these, he said, were virtually unhurt.

Wolff said there were 139 passengers aboard, most of them Germans, and 18 crew members. He said previous death figures announced by Kenya's Communications Minister, Omolo Okero, were incorrect.

Lufthansa said they had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, but added that the jumbo jet's flight recorder had been recovered.

Witnesses said the plane apparently lost power shortly after takeoff on the final leg of a Frankfurt-to-Johannesburg, South Africa, flight and its tail section struck an embankment, breaking the plane into a dozen pieces.

AT & T Trading Halted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The justice department brought anti-trust charges against American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. today, accusing the world's largest privately owned firm of monopolizing telecommunications service and equipment in the United States.

The civil suit, which also names Western Electric Co. Inc., and Bell Telephone Laboratories Inc., as defendants, asked the court for "substantial divestiture by AT&T"

The Securities and Exchange Commission earlier halted trading of AT&T securities at 3 p.m. EST.

The suit charges the three defendants "with combining and conspiring to monopolize, attempting to monopolize and monopolizing the telecommunications service and equipments market . . . "

NEWS BRIEFS

How Sweet It Is

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Michigan Sugar Co. said Tuesday its profits during the past 12 months were up 2,000 per cent above the 1973 fiscal year with sales just about doubled. The profits would have been a 4,000-per-cent increase except for a change in accounting procedures, the company said.

Woods Woes Deepen

VANCOUVER (CP)— The Council of Forest Industries says that unemployment in the British Columbia forest industry continues to climb. Executive vice-president N. R. Dusting, FIR executive vice-president, said Tuesday the current layoff figure is 15,258, an increase of four per cent since Nov. 1 when the total was 14,719 workers laid off.

Swiss Franc Rush

BERN (AP) — Switzerland moved Wednesday to check an international rush for the Swiss franc by imposing a stiff penalty on all new non-resident deposits. The move aimed to restore calm to the monetary markets after demand for the franc had sent the U.S. dollar and all other major western currencies declining sharply against the Swiss currency.

Ties With Tokyo Pledged by Ford

TOKYO (UPI) — Amid predictions the ruling Japanese government might fall within the week, President Ford agreed today with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka on the need to halt the spread of nuclear weapons and pledged closer ties between the two countries.

Ford wound up his hectic second full day in Tokyo at a banquet for Emperor Hirohito with a toast to "the government of Japan and millions and millions of Japanese."

Borrowing the words of the first Japanese envoy to the United States, Ford told Hirohito the most important lesson he had learned in his "memorable" trip to Japan was "the time has come when no nation may remain isolated and refuse to take part in the affairs of the rest of the world."

Ford began his day with a second round of talks with Tanaka, then addressed a luncheon at the Japan Press Club, watched a demonstration of martial arts and attended three cocktail parties prior to the banquet. One party was for leaders of the U.S. community in Japan.

Tanaka and Ford issued a joint communique agreeing on the need to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons — a clear effort to appease Japanese sensitivities over recent reports that U.S. warships bearing atomic weapons have stopped in Japanese ports.

The communique also appeared to signal Japan's willingness, after initial opposition, to accept a Ford administration proposal for all oil consuming nations to cut their petroleum imports by 10 per cent.

Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger said Ford's official discussion in Tokyo had "achieved the optimum of what he could have hoped for."

Budget Takes Blame For Oil Stock Drop

CALGARY (CP) — Prices of Canadian-based oil company stocks declined Tuesday in response to provisions in the federal budget, says Ernie Braithwaite, vice-president of the Alberta district, Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

He said oil stock prices were off 10 points, one of the largest drops this year and the largest since May 7, the day after the initial federal budget was introduced.

The budget Monday night refused oil companies the right to deduct provincial royalties from their income taxes.

Braithwaite said the shares traded Tuesday were in small volumes, indicating that individual shareholders were disposing of their holdings.

But another investment spokesman said the decline in prices was an "over-reaction" and prices should begin to pick up today.

UAW Insists Chrysler Boss Quit

DETROIT (AP) The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employees scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three auto employees out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice-President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,000 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from Nov. 27 until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The company's Windsor, Ont., plant will remain in operation.

The firm is the seventh largest in the United States with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 20,300 workers already on layoffs, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December.

About 95,000 auto workers were on layoffs this week including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler. The remaining 31,575 are on temporary layoff.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent.

UAW spokesman Fraser said Chrysler will save $19 million in holiday pay by laying off the workers.

Under a special agreement reached with the UAW Tuesday, workers with more than a year seniority will receive 100 per cent of their regular take home pay during the eight-day holiday period, including company and government unemployment benefits.
